I am very interested that my DEC site plan review is tied to AMCO determination for application completeness. Is this de rigeur? How do these things come together at all?

Is there something I can do to fain completeness designation? I've been #8 in the cue for a month.

Good morning,

Your application is about the 8th one in the queue. This application will not be reviewed in time to make it to the November meeting. Yes, we know DEC will not review your plan until they receive a notice from us which is when your application has been deemed complete by AMCO's director.

Thank you

Hello and good morning,

I am looking at the AMCO license progress list, and I see the Sparkle Farms application is in the cue under review. Could you tell me the status of the application? Has anyone opened the review and begun examining the documents? We would like to get on the November meeting agenda. I spoke with DEC, who will not even look at our plan review until the application is deemed complete. We have our project on hold until they approve our site plan. We have been on hold for 8 weeks come Monday, October 16. Especially now that winter is fast approaching, it is imperative to remain vigilant. Please offer me a reassurance that my application is on the horizon for review.

Once the Jessica Davison at DEC receives some indication from your office that the matter of the completed application is in order, they will begin a review of our application to see that we have 3 sinks, a handwashing station, etc. and propose corrections. I would be grateful for any news you might offer. We have to pour a cement floor and get the walls up and dry in the structure. Once the snow flies we may have to defer until summer 2018 to complete our construction project. I am sure you understand how frustrated we are, and how we wish to assure DEC that we are complying with their requirements as we intend to do.

To be clear, they will not even look at our documents until our application is deemed complete. They are not requiring the license be awarded, only that the materials be complete. Please offer me any information on the status of our application as you might have.

Sincerely yours,

Christopher Wilhelm
