Signature Collection: Methods and Results

The geographical area, know as Copper Center, Alaska, is located around a collection of houses, commonly referred to as a "village" and a US Post Office station. There are no municipal boundaries nor locally elected officials that give this "village" and outlying residences a sense of local government.

As there are no sources to verify how many permanent residents, 21-years or older live within a one-mile radius of the proposed cultivation facility, I needed to do my own data research and collection.

I used Google Earth to draw a one mile radius centered on the proposed cultivation facility. After drawing a one-mile ring, I went to every house in the circle. Where the house was empty or the resident would not provide the age and and numbers of the residents, I asked their neighbors.

I found that there were 74 permanent residents 21-years of age or older within the one-mile radius of the cultivation facility.

Permanent resident 21-years of age or older:	74
Signatures needed to reach 50% approval	37
Number of signatures received for approval	42

42/74 = 0.56756 or 56.76% of local residential population approval.
