When an Indian was found, rumored, or even thought to have spoken their native language by a staff member, their mouths were forced open and cleaned with soap. Their objective being, to purify the dirty form of communication that is shared between Natives alike. All because our Native Americans, our ancestors, our predecessors, the ones who walked this earth before us, were told that our culture was inferior to theirs.

According to my very own grandmother, who had no choice but to attend Chemawa Indian School, a boarding school located in Salem, Oregon, her 4 years were quite unforgettable. In her own words, she said, "Yugtun qalartevkaqsaitaakut." which means, "They told us not to speak Yup'ik."

When asked how they were scolded and punished, she looked straight into my eyes and remained silent. Those moments of silence were flashbacks of the harsh conditions that she had to survive for 4 long years.

My dear grandmother said thousands of our Yup'ik elders and ancestors were extracted from their homes and sent to various boarding schools throughout Alaska and the lower 48. Out of respect, I called off the interview, hoping and praying that I did not cut open old scars.

She made one final comment. She said she was not allowed to communicate with our family during her duration at Chemawa. She was not allowed to call, send letters, or be in contact to the ones that she held closest to her heart.

The damage caused by the BIA cannot be undone. According to the Alaska Native Language Center, only 45 percent of our 21,000 Yup'ik people can speak Yup'ik. My grandmother along with other Yup'ik elders say within a century, our language will cease to exist.

The conclude, the BIA damaged the cultures of many Native American Tribes. An immense amount of our Native Americans who endured Boarding Schools are still alive today. The BIA's ways were inhumane, traumatizing, cruel, and unjust. Hopefully, I have shed some light on the forgotten chapter of one of the darkest moments in our culture's history when the BIA, tried to save the man, but killed the Indian.
