INTRODUCTION

"Rarely do local governments have the opportunity to acquire at no cost large undeveloped tracts of land. In Alaska, municipalities have been the beneficiaries of several important pieces of legislation, which provide for transfers of property to municipal ownership The possession of this undeveloped land creates a conveyance problem for local governments. If municipalities retain these conveyances for public use, local community development could be severely inhibited. It will be incumbent upon municipalities in the future to convey portions of municipal land holdings into private ownership."

The acquisition, management, and disposal of municipal land is a normal part of local government operations. In Alaska, however, municipalities must address special considerations in the management and transfer of public land.

Of particular significance to Alaskan municipalities are three important pieces of legislation that provide for the transfer of property to municipal land ownership: the General Grant Land law (AS 29.65), the Alaska Native Townsite Act (ANTA), and Section 14(c)(3) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA). The provisions of these laws, in combination with State constitutional, statutory, and other mandates, create unique challenges to public land conveyance in the state, particularly with respect to the development of ordinances for the management and transfer of municipal land.

The purpose of this handbook is to provide guidance in the drafting of ordinances for municipal land acquisition, management, and disposal in Alaska. The first half of the handbook covers the considerations, policies and procedures for the management and transfer of municipal land, and provides sample ordinance documents for training purposes, including:

• the major considerations involved with municipal land acquisition, management, and disposal;

• a model code ordinance for the acquisition, management, and disposal of land;

• explanatory notes regarding provisions of the model code ordinance;

• a sample resolution and non-code ordinance for acquisition of municipal land; and

• sample documents and procedures for temporary and casual uses of municipal lands.

The second half of this handbook contains a set of appendices providing State Attorney General opinions, information of relevance from two community legal assistance grants, and other legal information regarding municipal land management and transfer.

Most of the information in this handbook has been based on materials compiled by the Department of Community & Regional Affairs during the 1980s; however, this information is relevant to current municipal land transfer and management issues. Wherever possible, the original sample documents have been reprinted for purposes of clarity in reading. In cases where a signed document is presented as an example, a copy of the original document is provided.

This handbook was designed to be used by Division of Community & Regional Affairs (DCRA) staff for training and technical assistance purposes. The handbook may also be used directly by municipal local governments. In the creation of any ordinance, it is always recommended that the expertise of the municipal legal staff be sought to ensure the development of an ordinance that is legitimate and defensible within the legal framework of the community.

Chapter One.

MAJOR CONSIDERATIONS INVOLVED WITH THE ACQUISITION, MANAGEMENT, AND DISPOSAL OF MUNICIPAL LANDS

This chapter addresses the constitutional, statutory and other considerations of municipalities in the management of public land.

ocal governments should be aware of the legal considerations that must be addressed in the acquisition, management, and disposal of municipal land. Municipalities generally do not have the same freedom in the real estate market as private individuals. The Alaska Statutes and the constitutions of the United States and the State of Alaska contain provisions that apply to municipal land acquisition and disposal, and affect the manner in which these activities take place. This chapter briefly addresses the constitutional, statutory and other considerations of municipalities in the management of public land. For a more detailed discussion of these issues, your attention is directed to Appendix 2B, page 141, Municipal Land Acquisition and Disposal in Alaska prepared by attorney, Timothy E. Troll, in 1987 for DCCED (then DCRA) as part of a legal assistance grant to the City of Aleknagik.

Constitutional Requirements

The constitutions of the United States and the State of Alaska contain the following provisions that apply to municipal land acquisition and disposal:

The Equal Protection Standards: Both the United States Constitution and the Alaska Constitution have equal protection standards that provide for equal treatment of people who are similarly situated. Article VIII, Section 17 of the Alaska Constitution specifically addresses the equal application of laws and regulations governing the use or disposal of natural resources.

Article VIII, § 17 of the Alaska Constitution:

"Laws and regulations governing the use or disposal of natural resources shall apply equally to all persons similarly situated with reference to the subject matter and purpose to be served by the law or regulation." Perhaps the simplest legally acceptable method for disposing of land is to convey it to the individual offering the highest price. However, this method may not meet some of the community's objectives such as encouraging young families to stay in the community and construct homes. City officials are generally in favor of designing land disposal ordinances and procedures to best meet the special needs of their community.

In accomplishing this, special provisions may be proposed in order to:

- make land available for residents at prices they can afford;
- minimize speculative buying of land in the community by outsiders; and
- convey land to people who have a valid claim of equitable interest in the land.

The Public Purpose Clause of the Alaska Constitution (Article IX, Section 6):

Article IX, § 6 of the Alaska Constitution:

"No tax shall be levied, or appropriation of public money made, or public property transferred, nor shall the public credit be used, except for a public purpose."

The public purpose clause of the Alaska Constitution is significant to the acquisition and disposal of municipal land because it states that public property cannot be transferred except for a public purpose. Local governments should be aware of the following public purpose considerations when disposing of municipal lands:

• municipal lands designated for disposal must no longer be necessary for public purposes.

• if municipal lands are to be disposed for less than fair market value or if preference provisions are involved in the disposal, a "Municipalities generally do not have the same freedom in the real estate market as private individuals."

Major Considerations ...

Statutory Requirements

As political subdivisions of the State, Alaska municipalities receive only those powers granted by the State government. In Alaska, this authority is granted by Alaska Statute Title 29, the law enacted by the Alaska State Legislature that governs the organization, powers, and activities of local government. Title 29 contains the following provisions that apply to municipal land acquisition and disposal:

• AS 29.35.010 (8): Municipalities have the power to acquire, manage, control, use, and dispose of real and personal property, whether the property is situated inside or outside the municipal boundaries.

• AS 29.35.090: The governing body shall by ordinance establish a formal procedure for acquisition and disposal of land and interests in land by the municipality.

• AS 29.25.010 (4): The governing body of a municipality shall use an ordinance to make appropriations. (Disposal of municipal land is considered an appropriation).

Codified and Non-Codified Ordinances

In order for a municipality to comply with Title 29, the municipality must first pass a codified ordinance that provides the authority and general procedures the municipality must follow in acquiring and disposing of municipal lands. Codified or code ordinances are permanent ordinances that are included in the municipality's code of ordinances. Code ordinances are general in nature and establish procedures. A model code ordinance is included in Chapter Two of this handbook.

Once the codified ordinance is passed, actual acquisition and disposal of lands (and management of lands, if these provisions are included in the ordinance) are handled with more specific actions (such as non-code ordinances or resolutions).

For specific land disposals and for certain types of land acquisitions, we recommend that a non-code ordinance(s) be passed. Most acquisitions can be effectively handled by resolution.

A non-code ordinance provides detailed information about specific land actions. For example, a non-code land disposal ordinance specifies the conditions, schedule, preference provisions, financial terms, price, location of the land, and other details about the procedures for each land disposal. Non-code ordinances are not included within the municipal code of ordinances.

Special Provisions in Municipal Land Disposals

There are several types of special provisions that municipalities may consider in developing ordinances and procedures for land acquisition and disposal. These provisions are introduced in the following section. More detailed discussion of these provisions is found in Chapter Five and Appendix 2 of this handbook.

1) Less than Fair Market Value: This provision is usually desired by municipalities when there is a fairly low income level in the community and a disposal of lands at fair market value would be too expensive for most residents to afford. A state attorney general's opinion (refer to Op. Atty. Gen of November 21, 1983, Appendix 5b, pages 253 -269) states that conveyances for less than fair market value are legal as long as there is some consideration, and consideration is not so insignificant that the conveyance amounts to a gift. An exception to this statement would be the donation of municipal lands to another government or charitable institution and used for public purposes (refer to letter from Timothy Troll, attorney to John Gliva dated March 6, 1987, Appendix 2a, pages 129-140).

Major Considerations ...

A conveyance of municipal land for less than fair market value should not be made unless there are findings that some larger and more important public purpose justifies the conveyance (refer to letter from Timothy Troll, attorney, to John Gliva dated March, 1987Appendix 2a, pages 129-140).

2) Preference Provisions: The usual goal of preference provisions is to make land accessible to local residents and minimize speculation by non-residents. It is extremely important that Constitutional provisions (equal treatment and public purpose) are carefully considered in preferential types of disposals.

a) Residency Requirements: One way that preference provisions are usually proposed is by the use of residency requirements. In determining what is meant by "resident", there are two considerations: 1) physical presence in a locale for a described duration ("durational qualifications"), and 2) a more subjective "domicile" test. (For additional reading on this topic, refer to: "Municipal Land Acquisition and Disposal in Alaska", Timothy Troll, 1987, Appendix 2b pp. 141-162; and memo to Jim Reeves from Doug Parker, January 24, 1984, Appendix 4, pp. 235-246).

> 1. Durational qualifications: This means the specified period of time a person must live in the community before qualifying to apply for land that is being disposed of. In this type of preference provision, the burden is on the governmental unit to demonstrate that the durational classification is related to a legitimate governmental objective. In other words, just benefiting residents is not enough. The municipality must show a strong relationship between the local problem and how the eligibility requirement will be effective in addressing the problem. For example: a city desires to make land available to residents to relieve overcrowding in existing homes.

In determining a durational requirement, keep in mind that a 30-day requirement will probably not be questioned. This period is also the minimum residency requirement in order to vote in Alaska. As another example, there is a one year residency requirement in order to receive an Alaska permanent fund dividend.

2. "Domicile test": This test involves determining that an individual's intent is to not merely live in a place but to make a home there. For example, applicants for Alaska permanent fund dividends must sign a statement of intent to remain a resident of Alaska. If, during the filing period, the applicant took steps to set up residency in another state (e.g., accepts a permanent job in another state), that person would not be eligible for a permanent fund dividend even though the applicant met the physical presence requirements of the program by living in Alaska for a one year period.

A city council could determine "subjective intent to remain" from such objective criteria as it may deem appropriate. The council could set the criteria and obtain the information from an application for lot purchases (refer to letter from Timothy Troll to John Gliva dated March 6, 1987, Appendix 2a, pages 129-140).

b) Post-Conveyance Restrictions: A municipality may also achieve the same objectives of a residency requirement by having "postconveyance restrictions" incorporated into the deed or lease conveying lands through the disposal program. These restrictions do not preclude anyone from participating in the disposal but when a deed is drawn up for the land, there are certain restrictions or performance standards that must be met by the recipient of the land. For example, the deed could require construction of a habitable dwelling within a prescribed period (refer to Troll report, Appendix 2b, page 31).

A common tool for enforcing a postconveyance restriction is the reverter clause. A reverter clause is specific language that is included in a land transfer document such as a deed or easement which calls for the reversion or transfer of the ownership of the land back to the grantor (previous owner) upon the occurrence or non-occurrence of a specific event or events. In the example above, including a reverter clause could be a way to cause the ownership of the land to revert back to the city if the habitable dwelling is not constructed. If a reverter clause is used a "fee simple with a condition subsequent" reverter clause may be the most logical type for the city. With a fee simple condition sebsequent the city can chose whether or not to take action to re-acquire the property by giving notice and executing a deed of reconveyance. The city's action would be formal and would create a record that provides notice that the land has reverted thus eliminating any doubt of ownership. It also has the advantage of allowing the city to choose whether or not to re-acquire the land, an important option if the land is no longer desirable for city ownership.

A more preferable tool to carry out the intent of a residential housing disposal program may be to enter into a contract and issue a right of entry to the successful applicant. The contract could require the applicant construct the habitable dwelling before the city would be required to transfer the land. In this manner, the city could with less expense offer the land to another applicant if the first applicant was not able to construct the habitable dwelling within a required time period. Developing an actual written housing disposal program that made periodical offerings of land could address some of these issues and also fulfill some of the legal requirements the city must meet.

The municipality could also minimize speculation by limiting the number of lots a person could receive through the municipal land disposal program (e.g., one lot per lifetime). This could be done by incorporating the language in the non-code ordinance itself and posted with the other information regarding a specific disposal.

c) Valid Claims of Equitable Interest:

One special type of preference provision involves the disposal of lands by a municipality to individuals who have valid claims of equitable interest in the land. Equitable interest is defined as a claim in property, which should be recognized in the interest of fairness or equity.

An example of equitable interest would be if someone believed they had received authority from the previous landowner (e.g., the federal townsite trustee) to move onto a piece of vacant property to build a house. Without a transfer of title taking place this person went ahead and built a house on the lot and began to live there. Subsequently, if the federal townsite lands were conveyed to the city, including the lot in question, the city would then obtain title to this lot and the improvements on it. In this case, the person living on the lot probably has a valid claim of equitable interest. If the city is to dispose of lands having valid claims of equitable interest, any ordinance conveying the property should clearly state what the council believes the equitable interest to be.

A trespasser would not have a valid claim of equitable interest; therefore, this provision of the land disposal ordinance should not be used to convey land to trespassers. Furthermore, a trespasser cannot make a claim of adverse possession on the land because adverse possession does not apply to state, federal or municipal property.

Chapter Two. 🕻

MODEL CODE ORDINANCE FOR THE ACQUISITION, MANAGEMENT, AND DISPOSAL OF MUNICIPAL LANDS

This chapter provides a model code ordinance for the acquisition, management, and disposal of land in accordance with AS 29.35.090.

A s discussed in Chapter One, a code ordinance is a permanent ordinance that establishes procedures, is general in nature, and is part of a municipality's code of ordinances. The model code ordinance presented in this chapter was designed to be used as a tool to assist Alaska municipalities in the ordinance-writing process. The intent of any model ordinance is to provide some standard language that communities can reword and tailor to their specific needs.

In the creation of any ordinance, it is extremely important for municipalities to consult with their local attorneys. The expertise of the municipal legal staff can assist communities in creating an ordinance that is both legitimate and defensible within the legal framework of the community.

Section 1. Rights and powers of city.

The city shall have and may exercise all rights and powers in the acquisition, ownership, holding and disposal of real property in any manner not prohibited by law.

Section 2. Acquisition of land.

A. The city may acquire, own, and hold real property or any interest in real property inside or outside the city boundaries by purchase, lease, exchange, transfer, donation, condemnation or declaration of taking under the city's power of eminent domain, or any other legal method. Unless otherwise directed by the city council, the mayor has authority to negotiate the terms of acquisitions, subject to council approval. Except as provided in subsections B and C of this section, and unless otherwise provided by law, all acquisitions shall be by resolution approved by a majority vote of the total membership of the city council. Real property shall be held in the name of "City of ______".

B. Upon passage of a resolution approved by a majority vote of the total membership of the city council, the mayor may act upon behalf of the city to execute those documents required in the acquisition of real property or interest in real property when that property to be acquired is conveyed from the Native Village Corporation in partial satisfaction of the requirements of Section 14(c)(3) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA). When the conveyance is for full and complete satisfaction of the requirements of ANCSA Section 14(c)(3), a non-code ordinance shall be passed which shall include: a statement identifying the amount of land to be acquired; a legal description; a statement that the conveyance, in conjunction with any previous partial reconveyances, is in complete satisfaction of the ANCSA 14(c)(3) obligation; a finding that the lands are sufficient for existing and foreseeable community needs; and a statement of facts supporting that finding.

C. The city may exercise the powers of eminent domain and declaration of taking in the performance of a power or function of the city in accordance with AS 09.55.240 - 09.55.460. The exercise of the power of eminent domain or declaration of taking shall be by ordinance which shall be submitted to the qualified voters at the next regularly scheduled general election or a special election called for that purpose. A majority of the votes on the question is required for approval of the ordinance.

D. The city council may approve and authorize the purchase of real property or interest in real property by contract of sale, deed of trust, or lease.

Prior to approval of the purchase of property under subsection D of this section, the mayor shall furnish the city council with an abstract of title, an appraisal of the real property, and a review of any problems in acquisition. The validity of any acquisition or purchase of real property by the city is not affected by the failure to furnish the city council with such materials.

Section 3. Economic development site. (OPTIONAL PROVISION)

The city may acquire, own, and hold real property, either inside or outside the city boundaries, as sites available for new industries which will benefit the city.

Section 4. Temporary use of city lands. (OPTIONAL PROVISION)

The mayor has the authority to issue special land use permits for the exclusive temporary use of city lands. A special land use permit does not convey an interest in the land and may be revoked for cause with 30 days notice. Unless otherwise agreed to in writing, the land will be restored to its original condition upon expiration or revocation of the permit. Easements will not be granted under a special land use permit.

Public comment shall be sought before the issuing of a special land use permit in those situations where, in the opinion of the mayor, a hazardous or obnoxious use might significantly affect the surrounding area. Notice of the proposed action shall be published and a period for public comment shall be provided. When significant adverse comment is received, a public hearing shall be held.

A special land use permit shall not be granted for a term exceeding one year. Special land use permits are not transferable nor renewable. Upon expiration, a special land use permit may be re-issued for a term not exceeding one year.

If a fee is charged for the issuance of a special land use permit, the fee schedule shall be established by the city council.

Section 5. Casual use of city land. (OPTIONAL PROVISION) A. No permit or lease is required for casual uses of city land. B. Any use under this section is at the risk of the user. The city assumes no responsibility for such use. C. The city shall notify the public of the location of city lands that are not open to casual use. Section 6. Disposal of real property. A. The city may dispose of real property or an interest in real property which has been found to be no longer necessary for municipal purposes. All disposals shall be by a non-code ordinance. The minimum time between introduction and adoption of ordinances for disposals other than by sealed bid or public outcry or lottery shall be _____ longer than required for other non-code ordinances. The ordinance shall include: 1. A finding that the real property or interest in real property is no longer necessary for municipal purposes and a statement of facts upon which such a finding is based; 2. A legal description of the property; 3. Type of interest in property to be disposed of as defined in section 11; 4. The purpose of the disposal; 5. The method of disposal as identified in section 7; 6. The value of the property or the value of the interest in property as determined under subsection B of this section; 7. The procedure for conducting the disposal and the time, place and manner in which the proposed disposal shall occur. B. The value of the property or interest in property shall be fair market value as determined by an appraisal prepared by a qualified appraiser or assessor, or the city council may determine the fair market value by any other means it deems appropriate. Section 7. Methods of disposal. A. All disposals shall be conducted in a fair and impartial manner. Procedures for conducting all disposals shall be set out in the non-code ordinance authorizing each disposal. B. Competitive disposal. The city may conduct the following types of competitive disposal: 1. Sealed bid auction. The minimum bid for a sealed bid auction shall be the fair market value of the property or interest in property as determined under section 6B. 2. Public outcry auction. The minimum bid for a public outcry auction shall be the fair market value of the property or interest in property as determined under section 6B. 3. Lottery. In the case of a lottery, the price of the property or interest in property may be

3. Lottery. In the case of a lottery, the price of the property or interest in property may b established by the city council.

C. Disposal for public services.

The city council may dispose of real property or an interest in real property to a municipality, state, or federal entity or to a nonprofit corporation or association, or a Native Tribal council, when the recipient is providing a necessary public service to residents of the municipality, without seeking bids and for less than the fair market value of the real property or interest in real property. If a disposal is made under this subsection, the non-code ordinance authorizing the disposal must include in addition to the requirements in section 6:

1. A finding that the disposal to the entity is for provision of a necessary public service and a statement of facts upon which such a finding is based;

2. A requirement that the conveyance of the property or property interest disposed include a condition that the title will revert to the municipality in the event the property is no longer used for the necessary public service justifying the disposal; and

3. In the event that the entity receiving the property or interest in real property is a Native Tribal council, a requirement that the Native Tribal council waive any immunity from suit for the purpose of enforcing the reversion provision.

D. Disposal for economic development.

The city council may dispose of real property or an interest in real property to any person or entity in furtherance of local trade or industry without seeking bids and for less than the fair market value of that real property or interest in real property as determined under section 6B. If a disposal is made to further economic development, the non-code ordinance authorizing the disposal must include in addition to the requirements in section 6:

1. A finding that the property or property interest which is the subject of the disposal will be used in furtherance of local trade or industry; and

2. A requirement that the conveyance of the property or property interest disposed include a condition that title will revert to the municipality in the event the property is no longer used for the local trade or industry justifying the disposal.

E. Miscellaneous disposals.

The city council may settle disputed claims or litigation by authorizing disposal of real property or an interest in real property.

F. Disposal to settle claims of equitable interest.

Upon a finding by the city council that it is in the public interest, the city may convey real property or an interest in real property for less than fair market value to a person who has a valid claim of equitable interest in the property or in a substantial improvement located upon the property. That finding shall be incorporated in and made a part of the non-code ordinance that accomplishes the conveyance.

G. Disposal for residential purposes.

Upon a finding by the city council that there is a current residential housing shortage in the community and that making land available for residential purposes at less than market value is in the public interest, the city may convey real property or an interest in real property for less than fair market value to a domiciled city resident who seeks the parcel for development and use as a personal place of residence. That finding shall be incorporated in and made a part of the non-code ordinance that accomplishes the conveyance. When real property or interest in real property is disposed of pursuant to this subsection, the deed or lease must contain a condition subsequent which ensures that if the land is used for any use other than residential use for a period of ____ years after the disposal, title will revert to the city. In addition, disposals under this subsection shall include a requirement for the construction of a habitable dwelling within ____ years after the disposal or title will revert to the city.

Section 8. Leases.

A disposal of interest in real property by lease shall follow the requirements of sections 6 and 7. The terms and conditions of leases shall be established by the city council for each such disposal.

Section 9. Easements.

The disposal of interest in real property by grant of easement shall follow the requirements of sections 7 and 8. The terms and conditions of easements shall be established by the city council for each such disposal.

Section 10. Notice of disposal.

A. A notice of the disposal shall be posted in three conspicuous public places within the city not less than ______ before:

- 1. The date of the bid opening; or
- 2. The date of the lottery; or
- 3. The date of the auction; or
- 4. The date of the disposal.

B. The notice shall include:

1. A legal description of the property and the type of interest to be disposed;

2. The method of disposal as identified in section 7;

3. The assessed or estimated value of the property or interest in property;

4. The date of the proposed disposal and the time, place, and manner in which the proposed disposal shall occur.

Section 11. Definitions.

EXPLANATORY NOTES ON PROVISIONS OF THE MODEL CODE ORDINANCE FOR THE ACQUISITION, MANAGEMENT, AND DISPOSAL OF MUNICIPAL LANDS

This chapter addresses the purpose, content and possible optional language of specific provisions of the model code ordinance presented in Chapter Two.

n the following pages, key provisions of the model code ordinance have been pulled out and examined. Excerpts of the key provisions are provided in shaded text boxes. Each excerpt is followed by explanatory notes that analyze and clarify the intent of each provision.

Section 1. Rights and powers of city.

The city shall have and may exercise all rights and powers in the acquisition, ownership, holding and disposal of real property in any manner not prohibited by law.

Notes:

This provision is the general authority upon which this ordinance is based.

Section 2. Acquisition of land.

A. The city may acquire, own, and hold real property or an interest in real property inside or outside the city boundaries by purchase, lease, exchange, transfer, donation, condemnation or declaration of taking under the city's power of eminent domain, or any other legal method. Unless otherwise directed by the city council, the mayor has authority to negotiate the terms of acquisitions, subject to council approval. Except as provided in subsections B and C of this section, and unless otherwise provided by law, all acquisitions shall be by resolution approved by a majority vote of the total membership of the city council. Real property shall be held in the name of "City of

Notes:

This subsection generally lists the ways in which the city can acquire land. The list is not all-inclusive. The provision states that the mayor can negotiate acquisitions, but the acquisition is not approved until a resolution is passed by a majority vote of the city council. All acquisitions shall be by resolution except for lands received under subsections B and C of this section. A resolution is recommended as the primary way in which the city acquires land since most acquisitions will be of a routine nature. Keep in mind that when the city purchases land, any appropriation of funds for that purpose will need to be approved through an ordinance process [AS 29.25.010(a)(4)].

B. Upon passage of a resolution approved by a majority vote of the total membership of the city council, the mayor may act upon behalf of the city to execute those documents required in the acquisition of real property or interest in real property when that property to be acquired is conveyed from the Native Village Corporation in partial satisfaction of the requirements of Section 14(c)(3) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA). When the conveyance is for full and complete satisfaction of the requirements of ANCSA Section 14(c)(3), a non-code ordinance shall be passed which shall include: a statement identifying the amount of land to be acquired; a legal description; a statement that the conveyance, in conjunction with any previous partial reconveyances, is in complete satisfaction of the ANCSA 14(c)(3) obligation; a finding that the lands are sufficient for existing and foreseeable community needs; and a statement of facts supporting that finding.

Notes:

This provision allows partial reconveyances of ANCSA 14(c)(3) lands to be approved by resolution, but the final agreement [when the city and village corporation agree on the amount and location of the acreage that represents a full and complete satisfaction of the requirements of ANCSA 14(c)(3)] must be accomplished through passage of a non-code ordinance. The reasons for approving the final ANCSA 14(c)(3) agreement by non-code ordinance are:

1) An ordinance process is a lengthier process, requiring several readings of the ordinance, posting of the ordinance, and a public hearing. Approval by resolution does not necessarily involve public review or a public hearing; and

2) If the ANCSA 14(c)(3) agreement is for less than 1,280 acres, the city is essentially disposing of an interest in the difference between what acreage they will be receiving and a potential entitlement of 1,280 acres. Therefore, it is the Department's interpretation that if the city is disposing of an interest in land, such a disposal must go through a non-code ordinance process.

For the Final ANCSA 14(c)(3)agreement, approval by resolution would probably be acceptable if the city and Native village corporation agree to reconvey a total of 1,280 acres or more to the city under ANCSA 14(c)(3). However, for the purposes of simplifying this model ordinance language and providing the required public hearing and posting requirements, we recommend that all final 14(c)(3) agreements be approved through a non-code ordinance process.

Also in section 2(b), it is specified that the mayor may act upon behalf of the city to execute those documents required in the acquisition of real property or interest in real property. The city may wish to word this so that the city council can select someone other than the mayor (e.g., city manager, or other city official) to act on behalf of the city for acquisition of real property.

51 Chapter three

C. The city may exercise the powers of eminent domain and declaration of taking in the performance of a power or function of the city in accordance with AS 09.55.240 - 09.55.460. The exercise of the power of eminent domain or declaration of taking shall be by ordinance which shall be submitted to the qualified voters at the next regularly scheduled general election or a special election called for that purpose. A majority of the votes on the question is required for approval of the ordinance.

Notes:

This provision requires that receipt of land through the city's powers of eminent domain be in accordance with Title 29. In second class cities, this type of acquisition of land requires the ordinance to be approved by a majority of votes by qualified voters. For home rule and first class cities, such a vote is not mandatory. Therefore, for home rule and first class cities, the second and third sentences of subsection 2(c) could be deleted and replaced with the following: "The exercise of the power of eminent domain or declaration of taking shall be by ordinance."

D. The city council may approve and authorize the purchase of real property or interest in real property by contract of sale, deed of trust, or lease.

Notes:

This provision outlines the methods of payment that the city can use in the acquisition of land. Contract of sale is used when the purchase will be for cash, and deed of trust is used when the payments will be spread out over a period of time (terms). Purchase of interests in land would also be for cash or terms.

B. Prior to approval of the purchase of property under subsection D of this section, the mayor shall furnish the city council with an abstract of title, an appraisal of the real property, and a review of any problems in acquisition. The validity of any acquisition or purchase of real property by the city is not affected by the failure to furnish the city council with such materials.

Notes:

The intent of this provision is to ensure that property bought by the city has clear title, is purchased for a fair value, and the city council has been made aware of any problems that may have arisen throughout the negotiation process. If the city council purchases property without those materials, that will not be cause for a third party (anyone who was not involved in the transaction) to invalidate the sale. This provision prevents the mayor from blocking an acquisition of property by refusing to follow city council direction. It might also be wise to include a provision that requires an environmental assessment before approval.

Section 3. Economic development sites. (optional provision)

The city may acquire, own, and hold real property, either inside or outside the city.

Notes:

Although it was already established in section 2(A) of this model ordinance that a city can acquire and hold property outside city boundaries, this section emphasizes that the city can own such properties for future economic development.

Section 4. Temporary use of city lands. (optional provision)

The mayor has the authority to issue special land use permits for the exclusive temporary use of city lands. A special land use permit does not convey an interest in the land and may be revoked for cause with 30 days notice. Unless otherwise agreed to in writing, the land will be restored to its original condition upon expiration or revocation of the permit. Easements will not be granted under a special land use permit.

Public comment shall be sought before the issuing of a special land use permit in those situations where, in the opinion of the mayor, a hazardous or obnoxious use might significantly affect the surrounding area. Notice of the proposed action shall be published and a period for public comment shall be provided. When significant adverse comment is received, a public hearing shall be held.

A special land use permit shall not be granted for a term, exceeding one year. Special land use permits are neither transferable nor renewable. Upon expiration, a special land use permit may be re-issued for a term not exceeding one year.

If a fee is charged for the issuance of a special land use permit, the fee schedule shall be established by the city council.

Notes:

This optional section is one of the ways in which the city can make land available for use without conveying an interest in the land. Temporary use of land allows an exclusive use of the land by an applicant for a period of one year or less. This gives the city a formal process for managing use of city lands.

As an example: A private operator needs a place to store equipment during the construction phase of a project within the community. The city has some vacant land near the construction site that would be ideal for this purpose. The private operator applies for a temporary use permit to use the site and is granted a permit from the city. Once the permit is in effect, the operator has exclusive use of the site for up to one year. No one else will be able to park his or her vehicles on the site or otherwise use the site until the temporary use permit has expired. The intent in having a temporary land use permitting system is to allow the city to handle short-term uses (for example, events) on city land by a relatively simple permit instead of having to go through a leasing process. If a lease were used, it would need to be approved through the non-code ordinance process because a lease is a disposal of an interest in land. According to this model ordinance, if an applicant wishes to have exclusive use of city land for one year or less, it is handled through the temporary use permit system. An exclusive use proposed for more than a year would be handled with a lease or deed to the land through the land disposal process.

A sample temporary land use permit application is included in Chapter Five of this handbook. Additional procedures may need to be developed depending on the needs of the city involved.

Section 5. Casual use of city land. (optional provision)

A. No permit or lease is required for casual uses of city land.

B. Any use under this section is at the risk of the user. The city assumes no responsibility for such use.

C. The city shall notify the public of the location of city lands that are not open to casual use.

Notes:

This optional provision is another way the city can make land available for use without conveying an interest in the land. In this instance, however, use of the site is not exclusive to one applicant but available to the general public. This provision basically clarifies the type of uses that are allowed on city lands without a permit. A definition of "casual use" and a short sample list of uses fitting this category are included in section 11 of the model code ordinance.

Subsection B of Section 5 does not serve to relieve the city of all liability involved in the casual use of city lands. However, it does put users of the site on notice so as to require a higher standard of care on their part.

Subsection C requires the city to notify the public regarding the location of city lands that are not open to casual use. The city may also want to include in the ordinance the minimum posting requirements for the information required under parts B and C of this section.

Section 4. Disposal of real property.

A. The city may dispose of real property or an interest in real property which has been found to be no longer necessary for municipal purposes. All disposals shall be by non-code ordinance. The minimum time between introduction and adoption of ordinances for disposals other than by sealed bid or public outcry or lottery shall be longer than required for other non-code ordinances. The ordinance shall include:

1. A finding that the real property or interest in real property is no longer necessary for municipal purposes and a statement of facts upon which such a finding is based;

- 2. A legal description of the property;
- 3. Type of interest in property to be disposed of as defined in section 11;
- 4. The purpose of the disposal;
- 5. The method of disposal as identified in section 7;

6. The value of the property or the value of the interest in property as determined under subsection B of this section;

7. The procedure for conducting the disposal and the time, place and manner in which the proposed disposal shall occur.

Notes:

This subsection states that the city can only dispose of real property (or interests in real property) that is no longer necessary for municipal purposes. Such disposals can only be done through a non-code ordinance process.

In the third sentence of subsection A, a city is given an option to add the amount of time between introduction and adoption of a non-code ordinance for non-competitive types of land disposals. The reason for this is to allow adequate public review time prior to passage of the ordinance allowing the disposal. The city's usual non-code ordinance timetable (from introduction to passage) may be too short (e.g., 5 days) to allow adequate public review.

For example, if a city has adopted only the minimum time requirements for passing an ordinance as set out in AS 29.25.020, the city only needs 5 days between the introduction of the ordinance and the public hearing regarding the proposed ordinance. Adoption of the ordinance could also take place on the same day as the public hearing. This timetable is shown below:

Day 1	Day 2	Day 7
Introduction of ordinance.	Public hearing notice + summary of proposed ordinance.	Public hearing held on pro- posed ordinance. The city council could also hold a meeting on the same day to pass the ordinance.

For competitive types of disposals (e.g., sealed bid, public outcry auction, or lottery), this model code ordinance allows passage in accordance with the usual city non-code ordinance timetable, but adds public review time after the non-code ordinance is passed (refer to section 10 of the model code ordinance). The reason is this: since the disposals are to be competitive, it may not be necessary to have extensive public review before the disposal is authorized. However, the public should have adequate time to look over the lands to be disposed of (by competitive means) in case they are interested in bidding on a particular lot.

A city may wish to standardize the time between introduction and passage of non-code ordinances for both non-competitive and competitive types of disposals. If this is the case, the third sentence of section 6, part A could read: "The minimum time between introduction and adoption of ordinances for all disposals shall be _____ days longer than required for other non-code ordinances."

In addition to timeframe considerations, a city may not want the public hearing regarding a non-code ordinance on the same night the ordinance can be passed. If this is the case, a city could insert another sentence under section 6, part A that reads: "The ordinance approving the disposition may not be considered for passage at the same meeting at which the public hearing is held." Or, the city could further specify a minimum period of days between the public hearing and the meeting that will be held to consider adoption of the ordinance.

Also within subsection A are requirements for what information must be contained in the city's land disposal non-code ordinances. Following is more information regarding items 1, 3, and 4 of subsection 6A. Disposal of real property (items #2 and #7 are fairly self-explanatory, and items #5 and #6 are explained below under the discussions for section 7 and section 6B, respectively):

Subsection 6A.1: This item requires a finding of fact by the city that the property (or interest in property) to be disposed of is no longer necessary for municipal purposes. This is necessary because the disposition of city property is a matter affecting the public interest. If this item were not required, the city council could be in a position of taking a risk by disposing of lands that should have been kept in city ownership for possible public use either now or in the foreseeable future. Subsection 6.A.2: The most common methods of disposal of interest in real property that the city will be considering include: deed, lease, or easement. Subsection 6.A.5: On the surface, this item appears straightforward. However, when the city is disposing of lands at less than fair market value or if preference provisions are being used, it is important for the city to state: 1) how a public purpose is being met by the disposal; and 2) how these "special" provisions of the disposal will meet a legitimate governmental objective. For example, if lands are being disposed in a non-competitive manner (e.g., less than fair market value and having residency requirements), it must be evident what public purpose is being achieved by not making these lands available to the general public (including non-residents of the community) at fair market value.

B. The value of the property or interest in property shall be fair market value as determined by an appraisal prepared by a qualified appraiser or assessor, or the city council may determine the fair market value by any other means it deems appropriate.

Notes:

This subsection gives the city council considerable flexibility in how they may determine fair market value of the property to be disposed. Following is a brief list of alternatives the city may want to consider in determining fair market value:

 The city can hire a professional appraiser to determine the value of the property.
 The city, if within a borough, can determine the value of a particular property by obtaining that information from the borough assessor.

3) The city can estimate the value of the land based on sales of similar lands in nearby communities.

4) In lieu of the above possibilities, the city council can reach a consensus on a fair price for lands within their community.

Section 7. Methods of disposal.

A. All disposals shall be conducted in a fair and impartial manner. Procedures for conducting all disposals shall be set out in the non-code ordinance authorizing each disposal.

Notes:

Section 7 outlines general requirements for the different types of land disposals that the city may elect to conduct. Subsection B lists competitive disposal methods while subsections C-G include noncompetitive disposal methods. Subsection A is self-explanatory.

Aleknagik Lake, Commerce/DCRA

B. Competitive disposal. The city may conduct the following types of competitive disposal:

1. Sealed bid auction. The minimum bid for a sealed bid auction shall be the fair market value of the property or interest in property as determined under section 6B.

2. Public outcry auction. The minimum bid for a public outcry auction shall be the fair market value of the property or interest in property as determined under section 6B.

3. Lottery. In the case of a lottery, the price of the property or interest in property may be established by the city council.

Notes:

This subsection basically indicates the types of competitive disposals that may be conducted by the city and the minimum bid or price (with respect to the fair market value) that will be allowed for these disposals. For disposals by lottery, the code ordinance is worded so that the city council is not necessarily locked into setting a fair market value on the property to be disposed. In this model ordinance, a lottery is the method to determine who will get a parcel of land if more than one party applies for the parcel through a non-competitive disposal. Therefore, because some types of noncompetitive disposals will be for less than fair market value, the model code allows "tiebreaker" types of lotteries to dispose of land for less than fair market value. In totally competitive land disposal programs, the city would probably want to set the minimum at a fair market value as established by the city council.

In addition to the three types of competitive disposal methods listed in this model ordinance, a city may also wish to include, as another competitive disposal method, disposal of land through a proposal process. For example, this type of disposal method is useful if the city has a tract of land it wants to dispose of for industrial development. Although the proposal process can be fairly involved, it would allow the city to determine which proposals would most benefit the community in terms of economic development, local hire, etc. Additional information on disposal by proposals can be found in "The Municipal Advisor" newsletter (a copy is located in the appendix to this handbook).

Explanatory Notes ...

C. Disposal for public services.

The city council may dispose of real property or an interest in real property to a municipality, state, or federal entity or to a non-profit corporation or association, or a Native Tribal council, when the recipient is providing a necessary public service to residents of the municipality, without seeking bids and for less than the fair market value of the real property or interest in real property. If a disposal is made under this subsection, the non-code ordinance authorizing the disposal must include in addition to the requirements in section 6:

1. A finding that the disposal to the entity is for provision of a necessary public service and a statement of facts upon which such a finding is based;

2. A requirement that the conveyance of the property or property interest disposed include a condition that the title will revert to the municipality in the event the property is no longer used for the necessary public service justifying the disposal; and

3. In the event that the entity receiving the property or interest in real property is a Native tribal council, a requirement that the Native tribal council waive any immunity from suit for the purpose of enforcing the reversion provision.

Notes:

This provision allows the city to dispose of land or interest in land to specified types of entities if the entity is providing a necessary public service to residents of the municipality. The land or interest in land under this provision can also be disposed of at less than fair market value; however, this is up to the city council. The other key stipulations on this type of disposal are: property must be used for the purpose for which it was conveyed or title will revert back to the municipality; and Native tribal councils must waive any immunity from suit for the purpose of enforcing the reversion provision.

It should be noted that the language in many reverter clauses (fee simple determinable) does not require an action by the city for the reversion to take place. The disadvantage of this form of reverter is that with the automatic reversion the parties may not be aware that the title has transferred and no record of a transfer exists in the chain of title to warn others of the problem. Since the transfer ownership in land in rural Alaska occurs infrequently the problem may go unnoticed for years. To eliminate any doubt that a parcel has reverted to the city, the city will likely ned to document that the condition was not met and that the reversion has occurred through a quiet title action. Arguably this is a greater burden for the city than the use of a "fee simple with a condition subsequent" reverter in which the city serves notice to the grantee and a deed of reconveyance is issued. The documentation can be recorded thus eliminating the uncertainty in the title. This also has the advantage of allowing the city to choose whether or not to take action and acquire the property in the event that it is not in its best interest to do so.

D. Disposal for economic development.

The city council may dispose of real property or an interest in real property to any person or entity in furtherance of local trade or industry without seeking bids and for less than the fair market value of that real property or interest in real property as determined under section 6E. If a disposal is made to further economic development, the non-code ordinance authorizing the disposal must include in addition to the requirements in section 6E:

1. A finding that the property or property interest which is the subject of the disposal will be used in furtherance of local trade or industry; and

2. A requirement that the conveyance of the property or property interest disposed include a condition that title will revert to the municipality in the event the

Notes:

This provision allows disposal of property or interest in property to any entity in furtherance of local trade or industry. The city council can dispose of property under this provision for less than fair market value if the city so chooses. As with lands disposed for public services, title to property disposed for economic development can revert back to the city if the property is no longer being used for the purpose for which it was conveyed.

E. Miscellaneous disposals.

The city council may settle disputed claims or litigation by authorizing disposal of real property or an interest in real property.

Notes:

This provision is included to allow a city to essentially dispose of an interest in property where that interest may be legitimately disputed or the subject of a law suit.

F. Disposal to settle claims of equitable interest.

Upon a finding by the city council that it is in the public interest, the city may convey real property or an interest in real property for less than fair market value to a person who has a valid claim of equitable interest in the property or in a substantial improvement located upon the property. That finding shall be incorporated in and made a part of the non-code ordinance that accomplishes the conveyance.

Notes:

This provision allows the city to dispose of real property or interest in real property in order to settle valid claims of equitable interest. The city council can, if they so choose, dispose of this property for less than fair market value. The intent of this provision is to allow the city to clear up title problems.

As an example, city officials gave verbal approval to an individual to build his house on a vacant federal townsite lot. Since the house was built after the federal townsite survey was approved, the individual was not eligible for a deed to the lot from the federal townsite trustee. Subsequently, the federal townsite trustee deeded to the city all the lots that had not been deeded to eligible individuals in the community. As a result, the city now owns the lot that the individual has built his house on. Through this provision in the land disposal ordinance, the city can dispose this lot to the individual who has been living on it. The city can also dispose of the lot for less than fair market value.

This provision also allows the city to dispose of real property or interests in real property to individuals who have substantial improvements on the property. Examples of substantial improvements include a house, cabin, or other habitable dwelling. This provision would normally apply to one lot per person or family.

G. Disposal for residential purposes.

Upon a finding by the city council that there is a current residential housing shortage in the community and that making land available for residential purposes at less than market value is in the public interest, the city may convey real property or an interest in real property for less than fair market value to a domiciled city resident who seeks the parcel for development and use as a personal place of residence. That finding shall be incorporated in and made a part of the non-code ordinance that accomplishes the conveyance. When real property or interest in real property is disposed of pursuant to this subsection, the deed or lease must contain a condition subsequent which ensures that if the land is used for any purpose other than residential use for a period of ____ years after the disposal, title will revert to the city. In addition, disposals under this subsection shall include a requirement for the construction of a habitable dwelling within ____ years after the disposal or title will revert to the city.

Notes:

This subsection allows the city to convey real property or interest in real property for less than fair market value to a domiciled city resident that seeks the parcel for development and use as a personal place of residence. The intent of this provision is to make land available to residents for housing at a cost they can afford. A major stipulation in this type of disposal is that the property must be used for residential purposes for a certain number of years. If this condition is not met, the title reverts back to the city. This condition assures the city control over use of the land. The period of years is not specified in the model ordinance since this will vary depending on the needs of each community.

Another condition specifies that a habitable dwelling must be constructed and the applicant must reside in the dwelling for a specified period. If either of these conditions is not met, title will revert back to the city. Again, a specific period of time is not given in this model ordinance since the period used will be based on a specific community's needs. The major purpose of this condition is to minimize speculation practices.

In section 11 of the model code ordinance, "domiciled resident" is defined as:

> "One who has resided in the city for at least the thirty days previous, maintains an address in the city, and intends to make the city his/her permanent residence."

This definition basically means that a person had to have lived in the community 30 days immediately prior to passage of the ordinance, still maintains an address in the community, and will sign a statement that says he/she intends to make a permanent home in the community. The latter intent requirement can be difficult to disprove. However, the "prove-up requirements" built into the ordinance (i.e., must build a residence within years and the land must be used for residential purposes) essentially accomplishes the same purpose. If the city has a zoning ordinance, these prove-up requirements may not be necessary to keep the land for residential purposes.

It may be argued that the city can make lands available for housing and at less than fair market value under other provisions of this ordinance. This provision specifies, however, that the use of the land must be for housing only. Other types of competitive disposals have not restricted the types of use to which the land may be put. Competitive disposals must also dispose of property for the "fair market value" as determined under section 6B. This provision is similar, therefore, to the other special types of noncompetitive disposals (for example, public services, economic development, or settling of equitable interests).

"The intent of this provision is to make land available to residents for housing at a housing cost they can afford."

Section 8. Leases.

A disposal of interest in real property by lease shall follow the requirements of sections 6 and 7. The terms and conditions of leases shall be established by the city council for each such disposal.

Notes:

This section states that leases are subject to disposal provisions of sections 6 and 7. This section also states that additional terms and conditions for leases shall be established by the city council.

Section 9. Easements.

The disposal of interest in real property by grant of easement shall follow the requirements of sections 7 and 8. The terms and conditions of easements shall be established by the city council for each such disposal.

Notes:

This section states that easements are subject to disposal provisions of sections 7 and 8. The most likely disposals of easements will be for utility line easements (fuel or electricity) for privately operated utility companies.

Section 10. Notice of disposal.

A. A notice of the disposal shall be posted in three conspicuous public places within the city not less than ____ ____ days before:

- 1. The date of the bid opening; or
- 2. The date of the lottery; or
- 3. The date of the auction; or
- 4. The date of the disposal.

Notes:

This subsection specifies the minimum posting requirements for competitive disposals. As discussed under section 6, the intent of this provision is to allow time between the passage of the non-code ordinance for competitive disposals and the actual disposal itself. This additional time period can be used by the public to look over any lots or parcels they may be interested in bidding on. As stated earlier in these notes (section 6), the city may wish to standardize public notice requirements to be used for both competitive and noncompetitive types of disposals.

Although not specified in this model ordinance, the city must publish a summary of the proposed ordinance authorizing any disposal in accordance with AS 29.25.020(b)(3)

- B. The notice shall include:
- 1. A legal description of the property and the type of interest to be disposed;
- 2. The method of disposal as identified in section 7;
- 3. The assessed or estimated value of the property or interest in property;
- 4. The date of the proposed disposal and the time, place, and manner in which the proposed disposal shall occur.

Notes:

This subsection specifies what needs to be included on the notice for a proposed land (or interest in land) disposal.

Notes:

This section contains definitions of terms used throughout the ordinance. A city may wish to reduce the number of terms defined within this section to only terms having legal effect or most necessary to the ordinance provisions. These terms would likely include: casual use, disputed claim, domiciled resident, equitable interest, hazardous use, interest (in property), obnoxious use, public interest, substantial improvement, and temporary use. All other terms that are defined in section 11 could be kept separate from the ordinance itself.

One term defined within this section, "temporary uses", contains a blank for the maximum value of improvements that will be allowed on the land that is subject to a temporary use permit. This value stipulation is an option the city may or may not want to include.

SAMPLE RESOLUTION AND NON-CODE ORDINANCE FOR ACQUISITION OF MUNICIPAL LANDS

rior to the passage of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA), many municipalities acquired title to undeveloped property through the state land grant program, which allowed municipalities to select up to 10% of the vacant unappropriated state-selected land within the municipal boundary. The objective of this program was to provide for public and private settlement and for the development of local land. Most of the land located within municipal boundaries has been selected by local village corporations under ANCSA and is no longer available for state selection under the Statehood Act for potential municipal reconveyance; thus most municipalities incorporated shortly before or after the passage of ANCSA cannot benefit from land acquisition through the land grant program. The acquisition of undeveloped land for many municipalities has come directly from the federal government pursuant to the Alaska Native Townsite Act (ANTA), or as a result of the federal obligation imposed by ANCSA on village corporations to reconvey certain land to municipal corporations. Although the ANTA was repealed in 1976, it still serves as a source of undeveloped land for municipalities. Municipal jurisdictions that include land selected by an ANCSA village corporation are authorized under Section 14(c)(3) of the act to select land for community expansion, public rights-of-way and for "other foreseeable community needs." Some municipalities have received land grants from other sources, such as the Railroad Townsite Act and the Presidential Townsite Act. The provisions of these acts are similar to ANTA. For more information on municipal land acquisition in Alaska, refer to Appendix 2B of this handbook, "Municipal Land Acquisition and Disposal in Alaska" by Timothy E. Troll.

Chapter Four.

Two examples are provided in this chapter for municipalities to use in the acquisition of land:

1) A sample resolution that a municipality can use to accept lands. This method of accepting lands can be used in most situations.

2) A sample non-code ordinance that a municipality can use to accept the final settlement of ANCSA 14(c)(3) lands.

CHECKLIST FOR REQUIREMENTS OF 14(c)(3) AGREEMENTS

ANCSA Corporations, incorporated cities and unincorporated communities must follow proper procedures when they enter into 14(c)(3) agreements. The checklist below allows ANCSA village corporations to perform a quick check to determine whether proper procedures have been followed. This checklist addresses major procedural formalities that must be followed for a 14(c)(3) agreement to be valid and binding on both parties. Any agreement that meets these requirements is likely to be valid. Failure to meet these requirements does not necessarily mean that the agreement is invalid, but does indicate that a potential problem may exist. In such an event, corporations are recommended to contact their attorney for a more detailed review of the procedure used to approve the agreement.

NOTE: A 14(c)(3) agreement that meets the requirements of the checklist will probably not be invalid because of a failure to meet procedural requirements. However, because this checklist is not designed to address all potential problems or issues that may arise, the checklist should not be solely relied upon to determine legal validity of a 14(c)(3) agreement. Any formal opinion as to the validity of a 14(c)(3) agreement can only be made by the attorney for the corporation, after a review of the individual facts of the situation.

SAMPLE DOCUMENTS AND PROCEDURES FOR TEMPORARY AND CASUAL USES OF MUNICIPAL LANDS

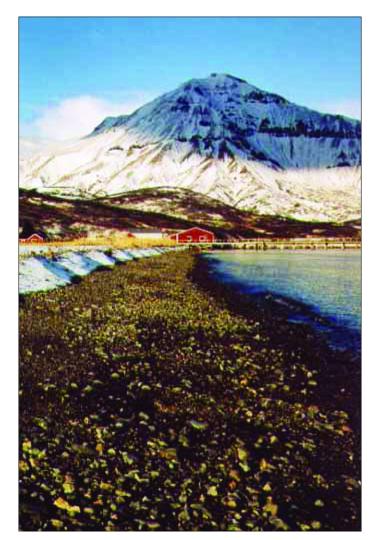

This chapter addresses two optional provisions to make municipal lands available for use without disposing of land or disposing of interests in the land.

code ordinance for temporary and casual ithin the DCCED model code ordinance are two optional provisions which deal with making municipal lands available for use without disposing of the land or interests in the land. These provisions were largely based on several provisions of the Fairbanks North Star Borough code ordinance #86-056 and on the borough's special land use permitting system.

Following are excerpts from the borough's use of borough lands. Also included is a "special land use application and permit" form and further general requirements involved with the special land use permit. The excerpt from the borough's code which deals with casual uses of land is included primarily because it specifies what is considered a "casual use" of the land. This list may be helpful to reference if a city wishes to develop a similar provision in their ordinance.

Excerpt from Ordinance No. 86-056; "An Ordinance Relating to the Acquisition, Management, and Sale of Land by the Borough"; Fairbanks North Star Borough

15.10.060 Temporary use of borough land. A. "Temporary use" means a use of borough land that is exclusive, but the use is not pursuant to an authorized lease, easement, extraction license, or commercial sale of borough sand, gravel, or greenwood timber resources. Nonexclusive examples of a temporary use are the use of borough land for access to a firewood cutting area or a temporary construction easement.

B. A person who wishes to use borough land for a temporary use shall apply to the mayor for a temporary use license. The mayor may grant to the applicant a temporary use license. A temporary use license is nontransferable and is valid for a time period no greater than one year from the date of issue. If the mayor determines that the proposed use may substantially affect the surrounding area, then the mayor shall publish notice of the proposed use. The notice shall include a description of the proposed use, and notice of a two-week period during which public comment on the proposed use will be accepted by the mayor. If the mayor receives substantial public comment adverse to the proposed use, then before issuing the license the mayor shall hold a public hearing on the proposed use.

C. The applicant shall pay to the borough the temporary use license fee required by the fee schedule established by the mayor. The mayor may waive the license fee for a public agency.

D. If the mayor determines a temporary use may cause damage to the borough land, then the mayor shall require that the applicant post a bond with the borough to insure that the applicant restores the land to reasonably the same condition it was in at the time the license was executed. The mayor shall not release the bond until the licensee has complied with all conditions of the license.

E. The mayor may inspect the borough land at any time to insure compliance with conditions of the license. The mayor may, for cause and without prior notice to the licensee, immediately revoke a temporary use license. A licensee whose temporary use license has been revoked shall, within the time specified in the license and if no time is specified, within seven days of the revocation of the license, remove from the borough land all improvements placed on the borough land pursuant to the temporary use.

F. The mayor shall not renew a temporary use license, but the mayor may reissue another license if the applicant has complied with the provisions of this section and the terms of the prior license.

1. This permit conveys no interest in borough land. This permit is nonrenewable, but may be reissued upon application by the permittee at the borough's discretion. The permit reissuance period may not exceed one year. This permit is revocable immediately, with cause. Revocation without cause is effective upon 30 days notice. Permittee shall be afforded 30 days within which to remove his possessions. This permit is not transferable. It is issued to authorize specific activities requested by the applicant and which are not included in the category of "generally permitted uses."

- 2. Existing valid uses shall not be prevented or restricted by permittee's use of borough land.
- 3. This land use permit is subject to the following provisions:
 - a. Existing roads and trails shall be used wherever possible. If off-road travel is allowed, activities employing wheeled or tracked vehicles shall be conducted so as to minimize surface disturbance;
 - b. All activities shall be conducted so as to minimize disturbance of drainage systems, changing course or character of waterbodies, seeps or marshes;
 - c. Users shall not harass or disturb fish or wildlife resources;
 - d. Trails and campsites shall be kept clean. All garbage and foreign debris shall be removed, buried or safely burned before leaving the area;
 - e. All due care shall be taken to prevent or suppress any fire in the permitted area. Uncontrolled fires shall be reported immediately;
 - f. All survey monuments, and accessories such as witness corners, reference monuments and bearing trees shall be protected. Any damaged or destroyed markers shall be re-established in accordance with accepted survey practices; and
 - g. Permittee agrees to indemnify, save and hold the Fairbanks North Star Borough, its agents and employees, harmless and defend each (at permittee's sole cost and expense) from and against any claim or liability for any injury to any person or damage to any property or any other claim or liability whatsoever arising or resulting from any activity conducted by permittee, permittee's agents, contractors, or employees, whether such activity is expressly authorized by this permit or not.

Excerpt from Ordinance No. 86-056; "An Ordinance Relating to the Acquisition, Management, and Sale of Land by the Borough"; Fairbanks North Star Borough

25.10.070 Casual use of borough land. "Casual" use means a use of borough land that is nonexclusive and involves only minimal disturbance to the land. Noninclusive examples of a casual use are hiking, backpacking, hunting, fishing, camping for less than fourteen days, picnicking, crosscountry skiing, snow machining, berry picking, brushing survey lines or trails where roots are not disturbed, livestock drives, and the use of all-terrain vehicles off an established road or right-of-way but on an existing trail.

- A. The casual use of borough land does not require a license.
- B. The casual use of borough land does not create an interest in borough land.
- C. The mayor may close any and all borough land to casual use by issuing a written order that contains a finding that an emergency exists and a statement of the facts on which the finding is based.
- D. The mayor shall publish notice of the location of borough land that the mayor has closed to casual use.

Chapter Six. SAMPLE NON-CODE ORDINANCES FOR SPECIFIC LAND DISPOSALS

This chapter addresses some of the different situations in which a municipality might dispose of municipal lands to meet a public need.

In the following pages, examples are provided for ways in which a municipality might settle land issues through the use of non-code land disposal ordinances. After each land situation described, a sample non-code ordinance is provided for the disposal of municipal land.

Example 1: Settling Claims of Equitable Interest on Municipal Lands

In 1986, a city received from the federal townsite trustee, deeds to lots in the federal townsite with a total area of 10 acres. A number of these lots (8) contained occupied houses on them on the date the city received the deeds. Legally, the city owns not only the lots but the improvements (houses) located on the lots as well.

In 1985, or before the city received deeds to these lots, the residents living on the lots had applied to the federal townsite trustee (the previous owner of the lots) for deeds. The residents were denied deeds to the lots since the federal townsite trustee could only issue deeds to individuals having improvements or the lots prior to the approved townsite survey date (in this example, a date in 1980). Since there was a need for land available for housing, the village council in 1981 had authorized these individuals to build on the lots even though the village council, not being the landowner, was not in a position to approve this action.

Now the city has received deeds to lots in the federal townsite including the eight lots that have houses on them. The residents living on these lots may be considered in trespass. However, since these individuals had previously received the village council's permission to build, it would appear that these individuals have some claim in the property which should be recognized in the interest of fairness or equity.

To settle this situation, the city council may elect to dispose of these eight lots to these individuals. In doing so, the council needs to first have a code ordinance in place which gives them the authority to dispose of municipal property. In this case, the city had adopted an ordinance similar to the DCRA model code ordinance that is in this handbook.

With a code ordinance in place, if the city council wishes to dispose of the lots to the individuals in question, the council needs to prepare and introduce a non-codified ordinance which will authorize this specific disposal. In developing this ordinance, the council must make a number of determinations. These include (also refer to the sample non-code ordinance that follows this discussion):

- a finding that the real property or interest in real property is no longer necessary for municipal purposes and a statement of facts upon which such a finding is based;
- a finding that it is in the public interest to dispose of municipal property to settle these claims of equitable interest;
- the value of the property and a determination of whether or not the property should be disposed of at its value or less than fair market value;
- other items including a legal description of the property, the method of disposal, and other procedures.

With the passage of the non-code ordinance, follow-up actions will depend on what is authorized by the ordinance. In this example (and as shown on the sample non-code ordinance), the city council decided to dispose of the lots at less than fair market value to settle claims of equitable interest. Also note that the sample non-code ordinance contains a provision that a reverter clause be included on the deed that is issued by the city. A city may not want to include such a reverter clause in the deeds.

Note that when the city is determining the price of lots to be disposed of in this ordinance, the cost of recording the deed should be added to this cost. Also note that the ordinance requires that if lots are disposed of by metes and bounds descriptions, the lot owner will pay the survey costs of the lot.

Example 2: Making Municipal Lands Available for Residential Development

In this example, a city wishes to make some of its land available to residents for housing. Since the city is not scheduled to receive a public housing project through the regional housing authority for some time, the city would like to make lots available to residents to enable them to build their own houses. The city also wants to price the lots at less than fair market value so that residents can afford to purchase the lots. The city may be exposed to a claim of "arbitratiness" if it simply states people can't afford to pay fair market value. Census Bureau information on poverty level in the community e.g. low median household income would be good supporting documentation. The city received, at no cost, deeds to the majority of its lands from the federal townsite trustee, including approximately 20 acres of unsubdivided tracts. It is on these unsubdivided tracts that the city would like to make land available for housing.

Before the city council can consider a land disposal program, the council must first have a code ordinance in place which gives the City the authority to dispose of municipal property. In this case, the city adopted an ordinance similar to the DCRA model code ordinance provided in this handbook. With a code ordinance in place, the city council now must prepare and introduce a non-code ordinance which will authorize this specific disposal. In developing the ordinance, the council must make a number of determinations. These include (also refer to the sample non-code ordinance that follows this discussion):

- a finding that the real property or interest in real property is no longer necessary for municipal purposes and a statement of facts upon which such a finding is based;
- a finding that it is in the public interest to dispose of municipal property to residents at less than fair market value for housing purposes. The ordinance must explain in the statement of findings why residents should be given preference, and why the land is being offered for less than fair market value.

In the sample non-code ordinance that follows, it is stated that there is a severe shortage of land in the community available to residents for housing purposes. The ordinance further states that the city wishes to make the land available at prices residents can afford.

The ordinance also indicates that the lands are being disposed of at less than fair market value. This has a direct relationship to the statement that the city is making lands available at prices residents can afford. This relationship could be further strengthened by discussion within the public record of what the average income level might be of community residents and/or how the city council determined the value of the lots to be disposed. Also, in the ordinance there is a residency qualification for applicants.

Also note the "prove up" requirements in the ordinance (e.g., applicants must build a house on the property within _____ years). Refer to Appendix __ of the hand book for further discussion of the residency requirement topic.

There is an additional requirement that applicants cannot own other land in the community. This ties back to the purpose of the ordinance to dispose of lands to residents for housing purposes. Because there is a severe shortage of lands avail able for housing purposes, the city does not want to dispose of lands to those who already own land upon which they could build a house. This type of provision wouldn't necessarily work in some communities. For example, if a city had a zoning ordinance which restricted a person from using any of his landholdings within the city for housing purposes, this person could claim the city is discriminat ing against him in this ordinance for not allowing him to apply for a city disposal lot for housing purposes.

"There may be other unforeseen circumstances which would serve to discriminate against someone."

There may be other unforeseen circumstances which would serve to discriminate against someone. The city may, for their own protection, want to include some language in the ordinance that allows exceptions to a requirement in certain cases.

The previous considerations point out that each city should carefully review the language of any model ordinance and revise the wording to fit its unique circumstances. It is also important that a city consider obtaining legal review of its ordinances before adopting them.

- the value of the property and a determination whether the property should be disposed of at market value or less than fair market value. In this example, the city decided to make the lots available at less than fair market value. Because the city council could not afford to hire a qualified appraiser, the council determined the fair market value of the lots by comparing prices of similar lots in a nearby community;
- 4) a legal description (metes and bounds, pending survey) of the property. Because the tracts the city wants to dispose of are unsubdivided, the city will need to plan the layout of the subdivision, clearly stake out the lots, and describe each lot by metes and bounds. In this instance, the applicants will pay the surveying costs (on a pro-rated basis). The city may also want to add into the cost of each lot the cost to record the deed.

Additional notes: As discussed earlier, Section 6 of the non-code ordinance establishes who is qualified to apply for the lots. Although a number of days was not placed in the blank on the sample ordinance, a 30-day residency requirement (State of Alaska voting residency requirements) could be considered. This section also restricts applicants to those who do not already own land in the community (see discussion above) and includes a requirement that applicants build and reside in a dwelling of _____ square feet within _____ years of this disposal. If these latter two conditions are not met, the title of the property reverts back to the city. Although the sample ordinance leaves these two performance periods as blanks, a city may want to consider a 3 to 5 year period for the building of a dwelling. The size requirement of a dwelling could vary widely depending on the community.

Section 7 of the non-code ordinance contains another performance requirement, i.e., the lot must be used for "residential purposes" during _____ years following the date on the deed. This period could vary widely per city. Note that the non-code ordinance states that the city retains the option to enforce or not enforce the reverter clause. In other words, an individual could appeal and possibly be granted waiver from the reverter clause by the city council.

Example 3: Making municipal lands available to a regional housing authority for public housing purposes

In this case, the municipality would like to dispose of certain municipal lands to the regional housing authority so that a public housing project can be constructed. The city has title to approximately 15 acres of unsubdivided land that was deeded to them from the federal townsite trustee. Because this public housing project will meet the current housing needs of the community, the city council is eager to dispose of the land to the housing authority so that construction can begin.

Before the city council can deed city lands to the housing authority, the council needs to first have a code ordinance in place which gives the city the ability to dispose of municipal property. In this case, the city adopted an ordinance similar to the DCRA model code ordinance that is in this handbook. With a code ordinance in place, the city council now must prepare and introduce a non-codified ordinance which will authorize this specific disposal. In developing this ordinance, the council must make a number of determinations. These include:

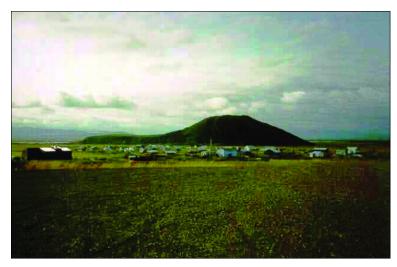

• a finding that the real property or interest in real property is no longer necessary for other public purposes and a statement of facts upon which such a finding is based;

- a finding that it is in the public interest to dispose of municipal property to the housing authority for the purpose of building a public housing project;
- the value of the property and a determination of whether or not the property should be disposed of at its value or less than fair market value. In this example, the city decided to make the land available at less than fair market value. The price per lot as shown in the sample non-code ordinance is the cost of recording the deed (the owners of the lots or the housing authority will also pay the surveying costs);
- other items including a legal description (metes and bounds, pending survey) of the property, the method of disposal, and other procedures.

(also refer to the sample non-code ordinance that follows this discussion)

Once the non-code ordinance is passed, follow-up actions will be based on what the ordinance has authorized. One provision of the sample ordinance requires the housing authority to construct a public housing project only, or else the title of the land will revert back to the city.

Example 4: Leasing a city-owned lot to a public agency for the construction of a public building

In this instance, the city has been approached by a public agency (e.g., U.S. Public Health Service, regional health corporation, etc.) that needs land to build a public building. The city has some vacant lots (that were deeded to the city from the federal townsite trustee) that would be suitable for such a building. Although the public agency wants to obtain a deed to the land, the city council prefers to dispose of an interest in the land by long term lease. As with disposing of title to land, before the city council can dispose of an interest in the land, the council must first have a code ordinance in place which gives them the authority to dispose of municipal property. In this case, the city adopted an ordinance similar to the DCRA model code ordinance that is in this handbook.

With a code ordinance in place, the city council now must prepare and introduce a non-codified ordinance which will authorize this specific disposal. In developing this ordinance, the council must make a number of determinations. These include:

 a finding that the real property or interest in real property is no longer necessary for other public purposes and a statement of facts upon which such a finding is based;

- a finding that it is in the public interest to dispose of this interest in property (a lease) to a public agency for construction of a public building;
- the value of the property and a determination of whether or not the property should be disposed of at its value or less than fair market value. In this example, the city decided to lease the land, therefore the lessee is not purchasing full title to the land, only a right to use the land for an extended period of time. In this case, the city decided to charge the lessee the cost to record the lease contract document and also charge the lessee a minimal cost per year for rent of the land;
- other items including a legal description (metes and bounds, pending survey) of the property, the method of disposal, and other procedures.

(also refer to the sample non-code ordinance that follows this discussion)

With the passage of the non-code ordinance authorizing the lease of the lot, the city can proceed with the negotiation of a lease with the public agency for the land. A sample lease is located in Chapter Seven of this handbook.

Example 5: Authorizing an easement agreement across municipal lands for location of utility lines

In this case, a utility company needs to extend some utility lines across city land. In order to install the lines, the utility company needs to have site control so that they can not only construct the lines, but operate and maintain them as needed. The city could possibly dispose of title to a strip of land containing the utility lines but chose instead to dispose of an interest in the land, an easement, to the utility company so that the city will retain the title to the land.

The land across which the utility company wants to extend the lines is a tract of land the City received from the federal townsite trustee. The legal description for the utility corridor will need to be done by metes and bounds until a survey can be obtained. The city council wants the utility company to pay for the survey whenever there is a need for a survey to be done for the utility corridor.

As with disposing of title to land, before the city council can dispose of an interest in the land, the council must first have a code ordinance in place which gives them the authority to dispose of municipal property. In this case, the city had adopted an ordinance similar to the DCRA model code ordinance that is in this handbook.

With a code ordinance in place, the city council must now prepare and introduce a non-codified ordinance which will authorize this specific disposal. In developing this ordinance, the council must make a number of determinations. These include:

- a finding that the real property or interest in real property is no longer necessary for other public purposes and a statement of facts upon which such a finding is based;
- a finding that it is in the public interest to dispose of this interest in property (an easement) to a utility company for construction, operations, and maintenance of utility lines;
- the value of the property and a determination, whether the property should be disposed at market value or at less than fair market value. In this example, the city decided to dispose of only an interest in property; therefore, the utility company is not receiving full title to the land, only a right to use the land for an extended period of time. In this case, the city decided to charge the utility company only the cost to record the easement agreement documents. In addition, any future survey costs, if a survey is needed (for any purpose) for the utility corridor, will also be borne by the utility company;
- other items including a legal description (metes and bounds, pending survey) of the property, the method of disposal, and other procedures. With the passage of the non-code ordinance authorizing the disposal of interest in the land by easement, the city can proceed with the preparation of an easement agreement.

SAMPLE LAND DOCUMENTS

This chapter presents sample land documents (deeds, leases, and an easement agreement) that could be used to convey land or an interest in land.

The reader should note that after the first sample quitclaim deed, the sample documents which follow correspond to and could be used as a follow-up to the non-code ordinances provided as examples #1through #5 in Chapter Six of this handbook.

Following are descriptions of the land documents contained in this section:

Quitclaim deed: This deed conveys whatever title a party has (if any) in real property to another party.

Lease contract: A lease is used to dispose of an interest in real property without transferring ownership of that property.

Easement agreement: An easement allows passage across real property without granting any other ownership rights in that property.

While many may request that the city provide a warranty deed or special warranty deed for a conveyance of land, it is recommended that the city issue only quitclaim deeds for such transfers. Many cities in rural Alaska do not have staff that have expertise in land title or land document preparation to determine if any interests besides the city's exist for a property. Unresolved, unrecorded or unknown land claims or interests in land frequently exist in rural Alaska communities. These interests may be superior claims than the city's interest in the land and may cause the city substantial liability if the city uses any warranty type transfer document. With a warranty deed the city guarantees that the recipient or grantee of the deed has been provided with clear title and will as some documents are written "make the grantee whole" or cover any losses of the grantee should some land title problem arise. Better for the city to place the burden of title search on the grantee since the grantee is usually requesting the land from the city and may already have some sort of development budget from which to work from. A certificate to plat or a preliminary title report are both minimum "land title searches" that can be conducted by a title company prior to making the land transfer. In land transactions in urban Alaska these are nearly always conducted. The seller of the property often shares some of these expenses with the buyer and the buyer often (expecially where financing is involved) obtains buyer's title insurance to protect against title defects that may arise. A danger that does exist for rural Alaska communities is that many of the land title policies are written so that the land title insurance does not cover certain land claims such as Native allotments, ANCSA 14(c) claims and unidentified easements such as RS 2477 and ANCSA 17(b). Because fewer land transfers occur in rural Alaska communities, the title companies do not specialize in these areas and tend to have numerous disclaimers if they do agree to do a title search. Unfortunately it is somewhat of a "buyers beware" market and those developers of land should conduct a certain level of research before acquiring and constructing. Additionally, the city should include with any transfer of land its own disclaimer that the transfer is subject to land transfers of record and valid existing rights.

"The following sample documents correspond to and could be used as a follow-up to the non-code ordinances provided as Examples 1-5 in Chapter Six of this handbook."

11. Termination by City: City may terminate this lease at any time if it should be determined by its City Council that public necessity and convenience requires it to do so, by serving upon Lessee in the manner herein provided a written notice of its election to so terminate, which notice shall be served at least ______ (____) days prior to the date in said notice for such termination.

12. SAMPLE ORDINANCES AND FOLLOW-UP PROCEDURES FOR COMPETITIVE LAND DISPOSALS

This chapter presents sample ordinances and procedures for each of the three competitive types of disposals (lottery, sealed bid, and outcry auction) that are outlined within the model code ordinance of Chapter Four.

The three competitive types of disposals discussed in this chapter are summarized as follows:

1. Land Disposal by Lottery, Bristol Bay Borough (1983) (Pages 69 – 75)

In this example, the Bristol Bay Borough received land from the State of Alaska. The Borough then subdivided the land and desired to dispose of the lots by lottery. To do this, the Borough outlined the purpose and detailed procedures of the lottery within the Borough's Code of Ordinances. This ordinance (codified) and a brochure regarding the disposal is included in this chapter.

2. Land Disposal by Sealed Bid, Fairbanks North Star Borough

(1987) (Pages 76 - 115)

A useful guide for municipalities who wish to dispose of lands by sealed bid auction, this example includes:

Chapter Eight.

- A non-code ordinance which authorizes the disposal of specific lands by sealed bid
- An internal Borough memorandum which outlines detailed procedures for conducting the sealed bid auction; and
- A sale brochure which provides information about the various lands being disposed of and sealed bid procedures.

3. Land Disposal by Outcry Auction, City of Petersburg (1983) (Pages 116 – 122)

This example includes:

- A copy of the code ordinance provision authorizing disposal of lands by auction
- A copy of the staff memo recommending the lands to be disposed of
- The notice containing the auction procedures, and
- The non-code ordinance authorizing the sale of auctioned lands.

Example 1: Land Disposal by Lottery

EXAMPLE 1:

Land Disposal by Lottery, Bristol Bay Borough (1983)

In this sample, the Bristol Bay Borough received land from the State of Alaska. The borough then subdivided the land and desired to dispose of the lots by lottery. To do this, the Borough outlined the purpose and detailed procedures of the lottery within the borough's code of ordinances. This ordinance (codified)and a brochure regarding the disposal is included in this section.

Note that the borough did not first pass a code ordinance outlining general authority and procedures for land acquisition and disposal before going ahead with a non-code ordinance for the specific disposal. The borough instead chose to include everything about this specific disposal in their codified ordinance.

Land Disposal by Sealed Bid, Fairbanks North Star Borough (1987)

This example includes:

- a non-code ordinance which authorizes the disposal of specific lands by sealed bid
- an internal borough memorandum which outlines detailed procedures for conducting the sealed bid auction; and
- a sale brochure which provides information about the various lands being disposed of and sealed bid procedures.

Two important points to note about these sample documents:

- The non-code ordinance doesn't contain a finding that the lands being disposed of are no longer necessary for municipal purposes or a description of the value of the property to be disposed (this second item is contained in the sale brochure). If the DCRA model code ordinance is used, note that these two items are required to be included in the non-code ordinance for specific disposal.
- 2. The sale brochure has a section regarding disclaimer clauses (page 6) and other required reading for participants (e.g., site inspection, utilities, trails and easements, etc.) on pages 8-11.

This information should be a useful guide for other municipalities who wish to dispose of lands by sealed bid auction.

PROCEDURES FOR LAND SALE CUSTOMERS

RECEIVING SEALED BIDS

The Department of Land Management will be receiving only hand-delivered sealed bids for the September 12, 1987 Land Sale. These sealed bids will be received in our office from 8:00 a.m. August 31, 1987 until 5:00 p.m. September 8, 1987.

In a sale of this type, it is very important to ensure that all customers are treated in a consistent manner. Therefore, the person receiving bids should follow these steps:

- 1. Review the sale procedure with the bidder. Make sure the bidder understands the modified sale procedures. In particular, emphasize the fact that the bidder can bid on as many parcels as desired but stands to lose $25.00 on each unsuccessful bid.
- 2. At least one large envelope will be delivered to you by the person submitting the bid. This is the delivery envelope.
- 3. Open this envelope. It should contain a smaller envelope, a Bidder Application Form, and a completed power-of-attorney form (if necessary). This smaller envelope is the SEALED BID ENVELOPE and SHOULD NOT BE OPENED.

Once the sealed bid envelope and the forms are removed from the large envelope, the large mailing envelope can be discarded.

4. Stamp the date and time received in the lower left corner of the sealed bid envelope. Remember, DO NOT OPEN this envelope. Initial the date and time on the envelope.

Make two photocopies of the Bidder Application Form and

- A. File one photocopy in the Bidder Application File located in Barbara Powell's office;
- B. Give one photocopy to the bidder;
- C. Attach the original to the sealed bid envelope with a spring clip.
- 5. Collect the $25.00 bid fee for each bid submitted. Give each bidder a standard borough receipt for the money collected.
- 6. If the bidder has had problems with large unpaid bills or delinquent taxes, remind he/she to call us on Thursday, September 10, 1987 to verify that the bidder is eligible for the sale.
- 7. Update 'BIDS RECEIVED' sheet on the counter.
- 8. Give the sealed bid envelope (with the attached Bidder Application Form copy) to Doug or Barbara.
- 9. Doug or Barbara will file the bid in the locking file drawer in Barbara's office.

NOTE: The procedures for opening the sealed bids on the day of the sale is very different from that used at past sealed bid auctions. Please read the following procedures carefully to make sure you understand them. Ask Doug or Barb for clarification on any point that is unclear to you.

SALE PROCEDURES

WELCOME: Announcer welcomes public to the land sale. See supplemental "Information for Announcer" instruction sheet.

BID OPENING: (Borough Assembly Chambers):

- 1. Announcer explains process of opening and announcing bids. (See "Information for Announcer" instruction sheet.)
- 2. Announcer opens all of the bids for all of the parcels. Recorder #1 writes the name of each bidder and the amount of each bid on the large bid tally sheet for each parcel. Recorder #2 writes the name of each bidder and amount of each bid on the small bid tally form for each parcel. As each bid tally sheet is completed, it is taped on the wall of the Assembly Chambers in the order of bid opening. This process continues uninterrupted until all of the bid envelopes for all of the parcels have been opened.
- 3. There will be a 20 minute pause at this point to allow the audience to inspect the bid tally sheets.

PRIMARY SALE: (Borough Assembly Chambers):

1. Beginning with the parcel with the most bids (if the parcels have the same number of bids, the priority will be determined alphabetically by subdivision name, block, lot), the announcer asks the highest bidder for the parcel whether he/she would like to purchase the parcel. If the high bidder does not want to purchase the parcel (or does not sign the real estate purchase agreement), the next highest bidder is given the opportunity to purchase the parcel. The announcer notifies the high bidder that a "second chance" to purchase the parcel will not be given unless all other bidders for the parcel decline to purchase it and the parcel is reoffered in the secondary sale. The runner will notify the announcer when the real estate purchase agreement is signed for each parcel.

Example 2: Land Disposal by Sealed Bid

- 2. The procedure outlined in #1, above, will continue until all parcels with bids placed on them have been offered to the listed bidders.
- 3. When a high bidder is determined, the announcer will instruct the bidder to go to the HIGH BIDDERS TABLE in the Ester Room to sign the real estate purchase agreement.

SECONDARY SALE:

1. Parcels that are not sold in the primary sale because all bidders declined to accept them will be reoffered for sale in the secondary sale. For each parcel, the announcer will read the same list of bidders in the same order as in the primary sale using the same procedure outlined in #1, above. Parcels which had no bids originally placed on them will not be offered in the secondary sale.

2. When a high bidder is determined, the announcer will instruct the bidder to go to the HIGH BIDDERS TABLE to sign the real estate purchase agreement.

PROCEDURE FOR HIGH BIDDERS (High Bidders Table – Ester Room)

1. Runner delivers the high bid envelopes to the Purchase Agreement Administrator I. The Purchase Agreement Administrator I:

A.Explains the provisions of the purchase agreement to the purchaser;

B.Types the correct information onto the purchase agreement form;

- 2. Purchase Agreement Administrator II checks each purchase agreement as signed, and:

1987 Sealed Bid Land Auction

INFORMATION FOR ANNOUNCER

This sheet should answer any questions you might have on minimum bid requirements and difference between successful and unsuccessful bidders. You will have to make sure that each bid meets the minimum criteria for bid submittal and be able to identify the successful bidder.

GENERAL INFORMATION:

The announcer is the staff worker mainly responsible for conducting the auction. Because the sale procedure is very different this year, the announcer will undoubtedly receive many questions from the audience regarding the procedure to be used. At the beginning of the auction explain the following (this script is only a suggestion; however, all of the points contained in the script should be mentioned in the introductory explanation):

"There will be three parts to this auction: (1) the bid opening; (2) the primary sale, and (3) the secondary sale. Please listen carefully while I briefly explain each part.

"In just a moment we will open all of the bids for all of the parcels at once and place them on large sheets of paper. These sheets of paper will be placed around the Assembly Chambers where you can see them. We will then give you about 20 minutes to look over the results of the bidding.

"In the primary sale the highest bidder for each parcel will be asked whether he or she would like to purchase the parcel. If not, the next highest bidder will be asked the same question, and so on until the parcel is accepted. Once you decide you do not want the parcel you cannot change your mind unless the parcel is not purchased by any other person that has bid on it. We will start with the parcel having the most bids on it and progress to that having the least number of bids on it. If the parcels have the same number of bids, the priority will be determined alphabetically by subdivision name, block, lot. Each bidder that wants to purchase a parcel will be instructed to go to the High Bidders Table to sign a real estate purchase agreement and schedule a closing.

"Parcels that received bids but did not get sold in the primary sale will be reoffered in the secondary sale. I will proceed in the same order as in the primary sale. This will give you a second chance to purchase a parcel you may not have accepted in the primary sale.

Example 2: Land Disposal by Sealed Bid

Competitive Land Disposals ...

"You may ask yourself, 'Why does this sound so complicated? What are the advantages?' The main reason we have adopted this procedure is to give you more flexibility at this sale. Because you do not risk losing a down payment, you can bid on many lots with the idea of increasing your chances of getting the parcel that you want. You can choose not to purchase a parcel on which you are the highest bidder without fear of losing your down payment. You stand to lose only the $25.00 bid fee. The secondary sale allows you a second chance to purchase a parcel you might have chosen not to accept the first time around.

"Does anyone have any questions before we begin?"

MINIMUM BID REQUIREMENTS:

- 1. The amount of the bid must equal at least 85% of the appraised value for the parcel.
- 2. A bidder or an agent with power-of-attorney must be present at the sale in order to purchase a parcel. When a high bidder has been identified, verify that the bidder is in the audience. If the bidder is not present, the parcel is offered to the next highest bidder. Ask the highest bidder whether he/she would like to purchase the parcel. If the bidder would like to purchase the parcel. If the bidder would like to purchase the parcel, instruct him/her to proceed to the HIGH BIDDERS TABLE. If the bidder does not want to purchase the parcel, ask the next highest bidder. Continue this procedure until the parcel is accepted. If all bidders decline to purchase a parcel, it will be reoffered in the secondary sale.

SUCCESSFUL BIDDERS:

A successful bidder is one who meets the minimum bid requirements, submitted the highest bid for a parcel, wants to purchase the parcel, and is present at the sale. In the case of a tie bid, the bid submitted to the Department of Land Management earliest will be the successful bid. Each bid envelope is marked with the date and time of submittal.

THINGS TO ANNOUNCE:

Announce the following at the beginning of the sale and periodically throughout the sale:

- 1. Warn the audience that all low bidders for a parcel should remain in the audience until you indicate that the purchase agreement for the parcel has been signed. Mention that the secondary sale will allow bidders a "second chance" to purchase a parcel.
- 2. Minimum bid requirements (see above).
- 3. Definition of a successful bidder (see above).
- 4. Warn the audience that all persons who sign a purchase agreement MUST be at the scheduled closing meeting that they will arrange at the time the purchase agreement is signed.
- 5. Announce that the OTC Sale will resume on Monday, September 14, 1987 in the office of the Department of Land Management.

SEALED BID LAND SALE PROCEDURES

- 1. You may submit any number of bids in this land sale. However, you may submit only one bid per parcel. There will be a non-refundable $25.00 fee for each bid submitted, regardless of whether the bid is successful or not.
- 2. The required down payment will be due on the day of the sale at the time the real estate purchase agreement(s) is signed.
- 3. You MUST BE PRESENT at the sale to purchase parcels. If you cannot be present, you can assign an agent to act on your behalf with a power-of-attorney form available from the Department of Land Management. If the high bidder is not in the audience or declines to purchase the parcel, option to accept the parcel will pass to the next highest bidder.
- 4. In order to reduce the number of defaults on land sold by the borough, a limited credit check will be done to determine the eligibility of each applicant. New borrowers with no credit history will be eligible. However, if you have had previous difficulties with large unpaid bills, delinquent taxes, or similar situation, you should call the Department of Land Management at 452-4761, ext. 242 on Thursday, September 10, 1987 to obtain your eligibility status. The Department of Land Management will not call you. YOU MUST CALL LAND MANAGEMENT TO BE CERTAIN YOU ARE ELIGIBLE FOR THE SALE. If you are determined to be ineligible, your bid will be declared invalid and your application fee will be refunded. This is the only case in which the application fee will be refunded.
- 5. Sale day procedures will be different from past sealed bid sales the borough has conducted. Please read the following very carefully to familiarize yourself with the new procedures. The new procedures are designed to make it easier for you to place bids and to increase the amount of flexibility you have on the sale day itself. These procedures will allow you to bid on many parcels and choose to purchase only those you desire the most. You stand to lose only the $25.00 fee for each unsuccessful bid. The sale will consist of these three parts:
 - a. Bid Reading At the beginning of the sale, all bids for all parcels will be opened, read publicly and listed on large sheets of paper placed within viewing distance of the audience.
 - b. Primary Sale Beginning with the parcel with the most bids, the high bidder will be asked whether he/she accepts the parcel. If so, that parcel is deemed to have been sold and the announcer will move on to the parcel with the next highest number of bids. If the high bidder does not wish to purchase the parcel or does not sign the real estate purchase agreement, the next highest bidder is given the opportunity to accept the parcel. A "second chance" for the high bidder to purchase the parcel will not be given unless all other bidders for the parcel decline to accept it and the parcel is reoffered in the secondary sale. This process will continue until all parcels with bids placed on them have been offered to the listed bidders.

c. Secondary Sale – Parcels that are not sold because all bidders declined to accept them in the primary sale will be reoffered for sale in the secondary sale. The same list of bidders will be read by the announcer in the same order as in the primary sale. This will give the bidders who have declined to purchase a parcel in the primary sale a second chance to purchase. Parcels which had no bids originally placed on them will not be offered in the secondary sale.

The announcer will clarify the above procedures at the beginning of the land sale to make sure everyone understands them.

- 6. If you are the high bidder, you must either proceed to the HIGH BIDDERS TABLE to sign a real estate purchase agreement or you must notify the announcer that you do not wish to buy the parcel.
- 7. All persons who have submitted bids for a parcel should remain in the Assembly Chambers until the announcer notifies you that the real estate purchase agreement has been signed. If the high bidder does not sign the real estate purchase agreement, the parcel will be reoffered to the remaining bidders during the Secondary Sale.

HIGH BIDDERS

- 1. At the HIGH BIDDERS table you will be asked to complete and sign a real estate purchase agreement with the borough.
- High bidders must place their minimum 5% down payment(s) with the clerk at the time the real estate purchase agreement is signed (on the day of the sale). Cash, personal checks, money orders, cashiers' checks, and certified checks will be accepted. Please make checks out to FNSB.
- 3. You must arrange an appointment with the Department of Land Management for closing to complete a Deed of Trust and Promissory Note or to pay in full.
- 4. You must pay for all recording, processing, and closing fees (approximately $150.00 per parcel) at the time of closing. Call our office at 452-4761 (ext 241) for an estimate of these costs.
- 5. See the section about TERMS below.

PARTICIPANT ELIGIBILTY

- 1. Any United States citizen or resident alien, eighteen (18) years of age or older, is eligible to participate in this sale. Please see Item #4 on page 2.
- 2. There is no requirement for the applicant to be a resident of Alaska.
- 3. The following persons may not participate in Fairbanks North Star Borough land sales either in their own name or in the name of their spouse, dependent child, or solely-owned or family-owned business:
 - a. Borough Mayor
 - b. Borough Administrative Director
 - c. Director, Department of Land Management

TERMS

- Option #1: A minimum down payment of five percent (5%) of the purchase price. The balance shall be paid in equal monthly installments according to an amortization schedule based on ten percent (10%) interest, for a period of ten (10) years. Parcels in the Grieme Road Agricultural Subdivision shall have a payoff period of twenty (20) years.
- Option #2: A discount of ten percent (10%) of the purchase price is available if the balance is paid in full by the time of closing. A down payment of five percent (5%) of the purchase price must be made at the time the real estate purchase agreement is signed if you choose this option.

Payments of unpaid balances may be accelerated at the option of the purchaser. There is no penalty for prepayment.

IF YOU CANNOT BE AT THE LAND SALE

If you cannot attend the land sale, you can give power-of-attorney to someone to act on your behalf at the sale. Special Power-of-Attorney forms specifically for the sale are available at the Department of Land Management. You must use this special form. If possible, the completed and notarized form (a notary is available at the borough) should be attached to your bid application and a copy given to the person with the power-of-attorney. Otherwise the person with power-of-attorney must have the form in his/her possession at the sale. The parcel legal description on the power-of-attorney form must be the same as the parcel on which you are bidding. If you bid on more than one parcel you will need a separate form for each parcel.

Be sure the person to whom you have given power-of-attorney knows that he/she MUST be present at the sale. If that person is not at the sale, you lose any opportunity to buy parcels.

REOFFERING IN THE OVER-THE-COUNTER SALE

Parcels not sold in the sale will be reoffered over-the-counter starting at 8:00 a.m., Monday, September 14, 1987. In the over-the-counter sale the lots will be offered on a continuous first-come, first-served basis during normal business hours. Parcels will be sold at appraised value and at the same terms as in the sale. For more information, contact the Department of Land Management at the Borough Administrative Center (452-4761 ext. 241).

DISCLAIMERS

This brochure is for informational purposes only, and does not constitute an offer to sell. It is possible that, after the publication of the packet, modifications may become necessary. Anyone wishing information concerning modifications may call or write the Borough Department of Land Management at P.O. Box 1267, Fairbanks, Alaska 99707, (907) 452-4761. Any such changes will be announced as soon as possible and will be available at the Department of Land Management. However, it is your responsibility to keep yourself informed of any changes or corrections.

Although the borough has researched the land that is for sale, the borough makes no warranty or representation, either expressed or implied, with respect to the land that is for sale, including its quality, merchantability, or fitness for particular purpose. This land is sold "as is" and you, the buyer, are assuming the entire risk as to its quality and suitability for your intended use.

In no event shall the borough be liable for direct, indirect, special, incidental, or consequential damages arising out of the use or the inability to use the land that is for sale, even if advised of the possibility of such damages.

The right is reserved to adjourn, postpone, or vacate this sale, in whole or part, at any time prior to or during the offering, where such action is deemed necessary by the borough administration to protect the interest of the borough. One or more parcels may be modified, or withdrawn, at any time prior to or during the disposal period.

The right is reserved to waive any technical defects in this brochure.

FURTHER INFORMATION

Further information maybe obtained from the Department of Land Management, Fairbanks North Star Borough, P.O. Box 1267, Fairbanks, Alaska 99707, or by phoning (907) 452-4761.

REQUIRED READING

SITE INSPECTION

ALL PARTICIPANTS ARE STRONGLY URGED TO PERSONALLY EXAMINE THE PARCEL(S) IN WHICH THEY ARE INTERESTED PRIOR TO SUBMITTING AN APPLICATION. The Borough does not warrant that the parcels are suited for any particular use whatsoever. There is no substitute for a thorough personal inspection of the parcel(s). If you would like a representative of the Department of Land Management to accompany you on a site inspection, arrange an appointment with our office at your convenience (call 452-4761 ext. 241).

CONVEYANCES AND TAXES

Conveyance of title to parcels sold in this sale will be by quitclaim deed. A quitclaim deed conveys title or interest in land without warranty. However, most land offered in this sale was conveyed from the federal government to the state and from the state to the borough. The borough obtained patent to the land through the Municipal Selections Act (AS 29.18.201-.213). There are no known intervening owners or claimants. Only the Hamilton Acres Parcel and the Fairmeadow Estates Parcel were privately owned prior to borough ownership.

Parcels selling for more than $2,500.00 will have $50.00 in sales tax assessed on them. Parcels selling for under $2,500.00 will have two percent (2%) sales tax assessed on them.

Property sold in this sale is also subject to property taxes and assessments. Presently there is no property tax due.

ZONING

All parcels offered in this sale are zoned in accordance with Title 18 of the Fairbanks North Star Borough code of ordinances. The parcels shall be used only in accordance with this Title.

A zoning permit must be obtained from the borough, Department of Community Planning, before the start of any excavation, construction, or installation for a new structure or for the modification of any existing structure which would result in a different use of the structure, an increase in number of dwelling units in the structure, or in the size, height or location of the structure. A zoning permit is not a building permit. There are not building codes outside of the City of Fairbanks with the Fairbanks North Star Borough. The zoning permit is used to determine compliance with the local zoning designation. Construction within the City of Fairbanks must conform to city building codes.

Example 2: Land Disposal by Sealed Bid

PLATTING

Lots in Skylight Heights Subdivision are being offered for sale contingent upon receiving final plat approval before September 12, 1987. Grieme Road Agricultural Parcels have received approval from the Fairbanks North Star Borough Platting Board. The plat for subdivision contains more details than can be included in the maps in this brochure. You are encouraged to inspect copies of the plats located on the counter at the Department of Land Management.

MINERAL RESOURCES

The State of Alaska retains ownership of all oil, gas, coal, ores, minerals, fissionable material, geothermal resources and fossil fuels which may be in or upon land conveyed to the borough. The State has reserved the right to enter upon the land to explore for and develop these materials. It may lease them or allow mining claims to staked. However, Alaska law also provides that the surface owner be compensated for damages resulting from mineral exploration and development.

A Mineral Closing Order has been obtained for Skylight Heights Subdivision. The mineral potential for other parcels in this sale is low. The Hamilton Acres Parcel and Fairmeadow Estates Parcel include the mineral rights because the original private owner obtained the land from the federal government through homesteading.

UTILITIES

Electric service may not be available to all subdivisions and parcels. Engineering and economic considerations, availability of rights-of-way, and how quickly the parcels are occupied will all play a role in determining how soon a particular parcel can be served. If electric service is important to you, contact Golden Valley Electric Association for more information before purchasing a lot. It is your responsibility to check on the specific availability of power to the lot in which you are interested. The borough is not planning to supply electrical power to or within any of the parcels offered in this sale.

Telephone service will not be provided by the borough. If telephone service is important to you, contact the Municipal Utilities System (MUS). If the parcel in which you are interested is within, or south of, North Pole, contact Telephone Utilities of the Northland.

SEWER AND WATER

Purchasers are responsible for their own water supply and sewer disposal systems. The borough does not provide installations, test borings, percolation tests, wells, or other improvements. All water and sewer-related improvements are subject to applicable State of Alaska regulations enforced by the State of Alaska, Department of Environmental Conservation (ADEC). These regulations detail specific requirements for water supply systems, sewage disposal systems, and solid waste disposal.

All subdivisions have been reviewed and approved by ADEC as required by state regulation 18 AAC 72.065. Potential purchasers are urged to examine the subdivision plats for any conditions of approval. Purchasers are required to contact ADEC prior to beginning any construction of a dwelling on a parcel to familiarize themselves with the governing state regulations and any special requirements that might apply. All sewage systems must be approved by ADEC.

To obtain water rights, the purchaser must apply to the State of Alaska, Department of Natural Resources, at the Northcentral District Office, 4420 Airport Road, Fairbanks, Alaska 99701, phone (907) 479-2243.

DRIVEWAYS, ROADS AND DRAINAGE

No obstructions shall be placed in drainage ditches adjoining any subdivision lot. Metal culverts of not less than 12 inches in diameter by 20 feet in length shall be placed on grade under driveways leading from the public roads onto any lot to avoid obstruction of any drainage ditch. If a parcel is not within a road service area, the road maintenance responsibilities rest with individual purchasers.

Within Skylight Heights Subdivision, First Addition, all driveway access must be from subdivision roads. No driveway access will be allowed from Murphy Dome Road.

TRAILS AND EASEMENTS

The lots being offered for sale are subject to trails or easements of various types. These trails and easements are delineated on the plat for each subdivision. It is important that you inspect the full sized subdivision plat(s) in the Department of Land Management office to ensure that you are aware of the presence of any trails or easements which may affect the lot in which you are interested.

AGRICULTURAL RESTRICTION

Agricultural use restrictions and covenants against resubdivision have been placed on the three agricultural parcels in the Grieme Road Agricultural Project. Prospective purchasers are advised to familiarize themselves with these restrictions (See page 39).

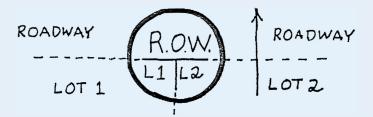

Example 2: Land Disposal by Sealed Bid

FINDING THE LOT CORNERS

Look for survey markers (similar to the following to identify the corners of a lot in Skylight Heights Subdivision:

This marker is approximately 1 1/2 inches in diameter and mounted on rebar close to the ground. Look for survey stakes approximately 15 feet from the edge of the driveable surface of the road. At the base of each stake you will find one of the above markers.

CHECKLIST

The following checklist is for your convenience to aid you in making an informed decision. All of these factors should be considered by a prospective purchaser, but other factors not included in this list may be of importance to you.

1	HAVE YOU INSPECTED THE PARCEL PERSONALLY? You are strongly encourage to review all information and personally inspect the parcel you intend to purchase. If you would like to inspect the parcel along with a member of our staff, please arrange an appointment at your convenience.
2	Are there any easements or other encumbrances on the parcel which you intend to purchase? This information is available at the office of the borough Department of Land Management.
3	Does the zoning of the parcel allow the use you anticipate for it? The Department of Community Planning can answer questions you may have regarding specific uses.
4	Does the parcel have adequate access year around for your vehicle? What provisions will be necessary for a driveway?
5	Is the parcel suitable for your anticipated use? Is there a good building site on the parcel? Consider the following:
	soils and vegetation easements slope and aspect zoning and setbacks
6	Are the soils on the parcel satisfactory for your intended use? What is the potential for permafrost and/or thermokarst pitting? Contact the USDA Soil Conservation Service (479-6767) for specific information about soil types.
7	Is the slope satisfactory? Is the slope too great for your intended type of construction?
8	Are the utilities you desire presently available, or soon to be available? If they are not available, how much will it cost to bring them to the parcel? Contact Golden Valley Electric Association (electricity) and the Municipal Utilities System (telephone) for further information.

Access: All lots are accessed by either Vancouver Road or Richard Berry Drive, both off new Murphy Dome Road. Murphy Dome Road is paved from the intersection with Goldstream Road and Sheep Creek Road to beyond the subdivision.

Fire Service Area: None.

Road Service Area: On August 27, 1987, the Borough Assembly will vote on the addition of Skylight Heights to an existing road service area. If approved, maintenance of the roads by the service area will begin July 1, 1988. For more information, contact the Rural Service office at 452-4761, ext. 223.

Utilities: The nearest power line is approximately two miles to the east in Drouin Springs Subdivision.

Zoning: Rural Estates LA-II (RE LA-II) with minimum lot size of 5.4 acres. For more information about specific uses within RE LA-II zoning, contact the Department of Community Planning at 452-4761, ext. 260.

Easements: There is a 15' public utility easement (P.U.E.) along some interior lot lines and a 30' P.U.E. along lot lines adjacent to road right-of-ways. Two lots have driveway easement along the P.U.E. You should inspect the detailed plat in the Department of Land Management office for the exact easements on the lot in which you are interested.

Covenants:

The covenants for this subdivision are listed on pages 15-17.

Mineral Rights: The State of Alaska has retained ownership to all mineral resources which may be in or upon the land. However, a mineral closing order has been obtained from the State for this subdivision. This closing order prohibits the staking of mining claims while it is in effect.

EXAMPLE 3:

Land Disposal by Outcry Auction, City of Petersburg (1983)

The City of Petersburg has a provision in their code ordinance (an excerpt of the provision is included in this chapter) which authorizes disposal of city lands by auction. To begin this process, city staff recommends to the city council which lands can be disposed of. These recommendations are presented to the council for their consideration. If the council authorizes the disposal by motion, notice of the lands to be auctioned and other auction procedures are published. After the auction takes place, the city council passes a special ordinance, that authorizes the sale of various lots which were offered at the auction.

This example includes:

- a copy of the code ordinance provision authorizing disposal of lands by auction;
- a copy of the staff memo recommending the lands to be disposed of;
- the notice containing the auction procedures; and
- the non-code ordinance authorizing the sale of auctioned lands.

16.12.070—16.12.80 The Mayor and City Clerk are hereby authorized and directed to execute a deed (lease) to: _____

(Buyer or Lessee)

Upon execution and compliance with all terms and conditions of this Resolution.

PASSED AND APPROVED by the City Council of the City of Petersburg, Alaska this ______ day of _____, 20____.

(Ord. 477 §3 (part) 1982).

16.12.070 Public auction. Any sale or lease of property shall be offered at public auction unless the council specifically approves a motion to allow an exemption to an auction. When property is sold or leased at a public auction the following procedures shall apply:

The minimum accepted bid shall be determined by the council after the review of an independent appraisal for market value.

Property owners adjacent to the property to be auctioned shall be notified of the sale by certified mail.

Notice of the auction shall be published once a week for two consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in Petersburg. If there is no such newspaper, the notice shall be posted within the same time at three public places within the city.

At the completion of the auction, the high bidder shall pay to the city an earnest money deposit equal to five percent of the bid together with any costs of survey, appraisal, advertising and other expenses incidental to the conveyance.

All lands not sold at public auction, shall be sold on a first-come, first-served basis using the application procedures described in Section 16.12.020. (Ord. 477 §3 (part) 1982).

16.12.080 Earnest money deposit. Five percent of the purchase price shall be deposited with the city for each lot or parcel of land within two working days after the approval of an application by the city council. Said earnest money deposit shall be applied toward the purchase price and the balance of the purchase price shall be due and payable within one hundred and eight days. If the applicant fails to make the payment in full at the end of one hundred and eight days, the earnest money deposit shall be forfeited to the city unless an extension is authorized by a formal motion and approval by the council. (Ord. 477 §3 (part) 1982).

Dear John:

I am enclosing copies of all of the materials that I have prepared for the City of Aleknagik under the Legal Assistance Grant. Also enclosed find my memorandum regarding some of the pertinent legal issues surrounding municipal land conveyances. I believe the memorandum addresses most of the issues I outlined in my letter to you of October 22, 1986. However, I would like to briefly provide a summary of my opinions with respect to each of the questions raised in that letter:

	1.	. Wha	at :	lega	1	infere	nces	or	concl	usions	can	be	made	from the	re	placem	ent	of	a	very	res	trict	ive	(former	Α.	s.	29.48	250)
with	a	broad	gra	int	of	author	rity	(new	A.S.	29.35.	090)	?

It is clear the Title 29 Committee and the Legislature intended to give municipalities the broadest latitude possible for managing their own land. Generally, when a law is repealed as was A.S. 29.48.250 the common law (court developed) rules that once applied to the situation are revived. At common law, the courts recognized that municipalities held property in both a "governmental" and in a "private" capacity. A municipality could not convey property held in its governmental capacity without authorization from state law. A municipality, however, could convey property held in its private capacity without restriction. Although the new A.S. 29.35.090 does not specifically grant authority to municipalities to convey property held in a governmental capacity. I believe the courts would construe this provision to grant the authority because by constitution and state statute powers granted to municipalities in Alaska are construed liberally. The common law distinction remains important because if a municipality conveys property clearly dedicated or used for a governmental purpose it must make specific findings that the purpose has been abandoned before the property can be conveyed. It is also important because property held in a governmental capacity may be donated or conveyed for less than fair market value only when the property will continue to be used for a public purpose. The same consideration may not apply to property held in a private capacity.

You should be aware that a dedication to public use can be made by someone other than the municipality. A situation encountered in rural Alaska is a conveyance of property from the federal townsite trustee to the municipality of property dedicated to "municipal reserve." Such property may be dedicated to "municipal reserve." Such property may be considered received as dedicated property which cannot be reconveyed unless there is a finding the property is not needed for municipal purposes. The distinction may also be important for transfers under $14(c)(3). A municipality, when considering selections under $14(c)(3) will often be selecting property that may be needed for some public purpose. For example, in Aleknagik I believe some land was selected for potential bridge sites and public beaches. A conveyance under $14(c)(3) can probably be considered a dedication to a specific public use. However, a city is not obligated to use the land for the purpose selected. However, before the property can be used for any other purpose it must be found that the original purpose has been abandoned or circumstances have changed such that the original purpose no longer makes sense in the context of the community. Village corporations may try to impose reversionary clauses on cities to require property conveyed under 14(c)(3) to revert to the possession of the corporation if the purpose for which it was selected is abandoned. Such clauses may be valid and cities should not accept property under such conditions.

The common law distinction between proprietary and governmental property is perhaps most important in the context of the "public purpose" provision of the Alaska constitution. That provision provides that "public land" can only be conveyed for "a public purpose." It is an open question whether land held in the proprietary capacity of the city would be subject to this constitutional provision. I feel the argument can be made, and must be made, if municipalities are going to be in a position to convey property to private individuals or businesses. I do not believe the Alaska Supreme Court would use this provision to prohibit such conveyances; the court will either use the distinction between governmental and proprietary property to get around the provision or will broadly interpret the term "public purpose" to accommodate this need. If the court were to hold otherwise, the result would impose severe restrictions on the development of our rural communities.

Appendix 2A

2. To what extent must the former statutory restrictions of A.S. 29.48.260 be incorporated into municipal ordinances enacted under a new A.S. 29.35.090?

The prior restrictions of A.S. 29.48.160 no longer pose any problem for municipalities, with the possible exception that a municipality may not be able to convey some of its property for less than full value.

3. Can the city under A.S. 29.35.090 convey property for less than full value?

It is clear that a city can convey property for less than full value to another governmental organization or corporation when the property will be used for a public purpose that will benefit all or a significant portion of the members of the community. The prevailing view at common law is that a municipality cannot donate or convey property for less than fair value to a private individual, business or organization that will use that property to the exclusion of others. We have no cases in Alaska discussing whether the Alaska courts will permit a municipality to convey property to a private individual business or organization for less than fair market value. In the ordinance I drafted for Aleknagik, I specifically tracked the regulations governing conveyances for less than fair market value adopted for the Alaska Municipal Lands Trustee. It is certainly questionable whether a municipality can convey property to an individual who is going to use that property only for his personal residence. However, I believe that considering the general poverty level of most people living in our villages and the fact that a municipality may be the only organization with property available in the core community that conveyances for less than fair market value may be upheld. I would recommend, however, that property not be given away, but some consideration be paid for the conveyance. The best method would probably be to use some income factor to determine the price to be paid. Certainly a conveyance for less than fair market value should not be made unless there are findings that some larger and more important public purpose justifies the conveyance.

John Gliva March 6, 1987 Page 4

Can municipality convey land noncompetitively and if so, when and under what conditions?

Yes, a municipality can convey land noncompetitively. However, a municipality does have an obligation to its citizens to obtain the best price available for the property it desires to convey. The recognized method for obtaining the best price available is to entertain bids for the property. Certainly if the primary purpose of the conveyance is to raise money for the city then a competitive process should always be used. If a city council determimes that a competitive process is not appropriate then it should make specific findings justifying this decision. Absent fraud or an obvious abuse of discretion the courts are not likely to overturn a council's decision to sell land noncompetitively. Absent any specific findings, however, the court could determine the decision was arbitrary. I believe a council could determine that a competitive sale would not be in the interests of the members of the community if it believes, and the facts justify the belief, that a competitive sale would eliminate a significant portion of the residents of the community.

5. Can a municipality convey property to a federally recognized tribal organization?

I concur with the opinion of the Attorney General that a municipality can convey property to a tribal organization. A tribal organization would, in most cases, be a legitimate nonprofit organization. The important question is whether the municipality could convey the property knowing it will be used only for tribal purposes to the exclusion of non-tribal members in the community. The problem arises, I believe, only if the property the city seeks to convey or the tribal organization desires to possess is property that was used or dedicated for a public purpose. If the tribal organization wants to obtain property by donation or for some consideration less than fair market value, then the conveyance should not be made without some restriction guaranteeing the property will continue to be used to benefit all of the people of the community. If the tribal organization were willing to purchase the property at fair market value, and the property in question was proprietary property, or public property no longer useful for a public purpose, it would not be a matter of concern whether the tribal organization used the property to the exclusion of non-tribal members. If a tribal organization desires to obtain land in order to build a facility that will be used to the exclusion of non-tribal members then it should be willing to pay the city fair market value for that property, or acquire the property from another source. The city may donate property but only if that property will be used for a public purpose.

6. Assuming the answer to number 5 is yes, what conditions, if any, must be placed on land conveyed to a tribal organization?

No conditions need be placed on property conveyed to a tribal organization if the tribal organization purchased the property from the city in a competitive sale or for fair market value. A restriction requiring the property to be used for the benefit of all members of the community should be attached to any conveyance when the conveyance to the tribal organization is for less than fair market value.

Can a city convey title to a trespasser?

A city can convey title to a trespasser but again the important consideration is whether the conveyance should be made for less than fair market value. A trespass itself confers no rights in the trespasser that the city must acknowledge. A claim of adverse possession cannot be made by a trespasser because adverse possession does not apply to municipal property. A conveyance to a trespasser should not be made for less than fair market value unless there are strong equitable reasons justifying a conveyance for less than fair market value. An equal protection problem may arise if the city grants a superior claim to a trespasser when the trespasser knew or should have known that he had no right to move onto the property in question. If there is some equitable reason or some public interest, such as clearing title to property, I would recommend that the only superior right a trespasser should have is an opportunity to match the highest price offered for the property by some other individual. A city could probably grant to a trespasser some form of an occupancy right that would expire when the trespasser's use of the property had been abandoned. This occupancy right could be granted by a permit or perhaps a lease.

8. What liability are municipal officials exposed to in land conveyance decisions?

Any property conveyance is subject to being set aside by a court if the conveyance was not made in accordance with local ordinances, state statute or the federal or state constitution. After a certain undefined period of time has passed, however, a credible defense of laches may arise. Laches is a defense when the person challenging the conveyance has waited an unreasonable length of time in order to bring his action. Generally, municipal officials, in their personal capacity, when acting in good faith and exercising discretion as municipal officials, are not liable personally for a land conveyance decision made while acting as a decision-making body.

I would now like to review briefly the land disposal ordinance I drafted under the Grant. I believe it may be helpful to you to understand the reasoning behind the provisions of the ordinance and where the language in some of those provisions was obtained.

Section 1. Authority to Dispose.

This provision merely grants to the City the power to dispose of its property.

Section 2. Disposal by Ordinance.

Section A provides that any disposal must be authorized by ordinance. This accounts for the apparent law in Alaska that a conveyance of real property is similar to an appropriation of The Alaska Supreme Court has held money. that such appropriations may only be made by ordinance. Although the common law permits conveyance be resolution, I think the decision referenced in the research makes it advisable in Alaska to require that all conveyances be authorized by ordinance. Also Section A recognizes the distinction between property held by a municipality in its private capacity and its governmental capacity. I have drafted it such that when the city council is conveying "governmental" property, that is, property that was used or dedicated to a public use, it is subject to an ordinance procedure that is somewhat more restrictive. Under normal ordinance procedure, a public hearing can be held at the same meeting at which the ordinance is scheduled for passage. My experience has been that often public comments made at such a public hearing are not fully evaluated by a city council if the public hearing is held at the same meeting at which the ordinance is scheduled for passage. Often the pressure for passage outweighs any comments to the contrary made by the public. For these reasons I recommend the public hearing on the ordinance be scheduled some time between the meeting at which the ordinance is introduced and the meeting at which the ordinance is scheduled for passage. Under this scheme the council has the time and opportunity to fully consider any comments made by the public and also has an opportunity at the meeting at which the ordinance is scheduled for passage to address any concerns that were specifically raised at the public hearing. Such a procedure, I believe, is appropriate because the public should have a greater opportunity to challenge conveyances of property that have been dedicated for the use of the public.

Section B merely provides that a lease of space or a short term ground lease can be disposed under a less restrictive procedure. The reasoning here is that most space leases within a municipal building are for a public purpose, most commonly a clinic or a tribal government office. However, I would recommend that a lease of space to a private individual or business for a length of time greater than a year should go through a formal ordinance process. The provision regarding short term ground leases was intended primarily to accommodate limited needs. A common example is when a contractor may be in town to construct a project and may need a place from which to stage the project. Because the use of the property is so temporary and often the be passed on a schedule to accommodate lease must thecontractor's restrictive procedure needs, a less seems appropriate.

Section 3. Form of Document of Conveyance.

This provision merely requires that the document of conveyance should be in a form that can be recorded. I would recommend that any documents be reviewed by an attorney and it may be helpful to contact the recording office to determine in what form deeds and contracts and leases must be in order to be recorded.

Section B is self-explanatory. It is my recommendation that any document of conveyance specifically refer to the ordinance authorizing the conveyance so that if a question arises the legislative history behind the conveyance can be easily traced.

Section C simply provides that when the city does convey a deed it will be a quit-claim deed. A quit-claim deed merely says that the city is conveying any interest which it has, and if it has no interest, it conveys no interest. The other form of deed is a warranty deed. A warranty deed guarantees the title of the property conveyed. If a city conveyed warranty deeds, it would have to defend the title in court if the title was ever challenged. Title in rural Alaska is often difficult to determine because of the various laws under which land rights have accrued. I think it would be unwise for a city to give anything greater than a quit-claim deed. If a purchaser is concerned about the quality of his title, he can always bear the costs of obtaining title insurance.

John Gliva March 6, 1987 Page 8

Section 4. Disposal for Fair Market Value.

This section provides that all sales of property should be for fair market value unless there is some specific reason to do otherwise. In the revised ordinance, I have included a definition under paragraph A of fair market value. This definition was taken from the Alaska Administrative Code.

Paragraph B provides that fair market value can be determined from an appraisal or in a place where a city assessor may exist by the city assessor. I have also provided a provision allowing the city council to use any other method it feels appropriate to determine fair market value. This provision is included primarily because appraisals may be expensive to obtain and, in an era of declining revenues, small cities may not be able to afford such appraisals. Also, it has been my experience that land values in rural communities are so uncertain that any value attached by an appraiser is no better than a value attached by a member of the city council. Often the price that a city council may set on a piece of property may be the beginning of the determination of what fair market value is in the community. I believe that a city council, whose members have lived in the community for all their lives, may be able to attach a value that an appraiser may be able to attach. Certainly as the community progresses and more and more land transactions on the private market are conducted, the use of an appraiser may become more appropriate.

Paragraph C tracks language from former A.S. 29.48.260 which did exempt from the provisions of that statute conveyances to the United States, the State of Alaska or political subdivision. I have added non-profit corporations or recognized tribal authorities and I believe the common law would support a conveyance for less than fair market value to these kinds of organizations so long as the public in general will benefit from the conveyance. This does not mean that any transfer of property to a non-profit corporation or tribal authority must be beneficial for all people in the city. It only means that a conveyance for less than fair market value must be supported by a public purpose.

Paragraph D tracks language in the Alaska Administrative Code with respect to property that can be conveyed by the Alaska Municipal Lands-Trustee. I have included the language "provided the claim existed prior to the date of passage of this ordinance" to accommodate the concerns raised at the meeting we had in Aleknagik. This provision should only be used when a person has a genuine claim and a real belief that he has a right to the property. It should not be used to convey property to a trespasser because a trespasser does not have a valid claim of equitable interest. A person who knew he had no right to move onto property, or could reasonably have determined that he had no right to move onto the property should be considered a trespasser and not granted a valid claim of equitable interest. Such equitable claims may arise because property lines were difficult to determine or someone reasonably believed he had authority, say from the Townsite Trustee, to move onto a piece of vacant property. An equitable situation may exist for someone who had always lived on a townsite lot but never went through the formal process of applying to the trustee. Any ordinance conveying property under this provision should clearly state what the council believes the equitable interest to be. I recommend that a city use the staggered ordinance procedure in Section 2 to give all members of the community an opportunity to challenge the council's determination that an equitable interest does exist.

Paragraph E also tracks language in the Alaska Administrative Code with respect to conveyances of property by the Alaska Municipal Lands Trustee. Of all the provisions in this proposed ordinance this is the provision I am least comfortable with. Simply because a resident seeks a parcel of property for the construction of a residence does not confer any legal right to have the conveyance for less than fair market value. It should be emphasized that this provision is only optional and a city should elect to use it only if there are other equitable considerations or overriding public reasons to justify such a conveyance. I have changed the language from that of the ordinance as originally introduced to simply allow the council to determine on a case by case basis what condition subsequent it will attach to a conveyance in order to insure that the property will be used as a primary place of residence.

Appendix 2A

I believe this provision should only be used when the council determines that the income level of most of the members of the community is such that they could not afford the property at its fair market value and that a corresponding public interest in developing the community, providing places for new residents or alleviating overcrowding should exist. The provision should only be used if the city is the only organization that can make the land available, and the pressure to make the land available is such that the city cannot reasonably wait a longer period of time for some other organization like the village corporation to come along and make land available. You will also notice that I changed the term "bona fide" to "domiciled." The reasons for this change become clear in Paragraph F.

Paragraph F defines the term "domiciled city resident" and this language also tracks language found in the Alaska Administrative Code with respect to transfers of land by the Alaska Municipal Lands Trustee. The term "domiciled" however, has a recognized legal meaning, which is "physical presence in the location with a subjective intent to remain." A city council could determine "subjective intent to remain" from such objective criteria as it may deem appropriate. The council could set the criteria and obtain the information from an application for lot purchases. The provisions of A.S. 15.05.020 relate to residency for purposes of voting; many of the standards set out in the statute are domiciliary standards.

It is important to recognize that prior restrictions on eligibility like "residency" remain potentially volatile sources for litigation. To the extent a residency requirement is attached, and the city council feels it must put some time period on residency, I would recommend a period of 30 days. The state currently uses a period of six months for eligibility to receive a permanent fund dividend and I would recommend that this sixmonth period be the upper end of any residency time period, unless a council finds some compelling reason to make the period longer. Again, in any ordinance authorizing the conveyance a council should make specific findings and refer to the facts justifying the residency requirement. The ordinance authorizing the conveyance should also set forth the purpose of the conveyance and it must be clear from the ordinance that the purpose of the conveyance and the residency requirement make sense together.

Often a city council's concern about conveying land to residents can be alleviated by post conveyance restrictions. Restrictions such as a "proving up" requirement or limiting lot sales to one per person will limit speculation in city property and will reduce the interest of non-residents in acquiring property within the community.

Section 5. Disposal Methods.

The disposal methods set forth under Section 5 are merely provided as examples. Paragraph D makes it clear the examples are not to be considered exclusive. This language tracks similar language found in the Anchorage Municipal Code regarding real property disposals.

Section 6. Exchange of Property.

This section was added after the meeting at Aleknagik simply to make it clear that a city may exchange property with another person or organization. If the property to be exchanged is going to be used by some organization for a public purpose, a fair market value determination would be superfluous because the public benefit is in the continued use of the property and not in the money to be obtained. I also provided that fair market value would not be necessary if the exchange resolves conflicts of title or secure public easements or rights-of-way for the city. I believe these are public interests that may be so overriding that a city could determine it need not incur the expense of determining fair market value because the conveyance should be made regardless of value.

My approach in developing this whole ordinance was to keep it as unrestrictive as possible. Prior to the enactment of A.S. 29.55.090 many municipalities had intricate ordinances regarding disposals of property in order to get around the restrictive provisions of the prior statute. Because those provisions no longer exist, an ordinance regarding disposal of municipal property should merely define the outer perimeters of the city's authority. The city council should have the widest latitude possible for managing city property. I believe this disposal ordinance allows a council to develop any procedure it feels is appropriate to fit a particular conveyance situation, rather than trying to fit a particular conveyance situation into the ordinance. By requiring all conveyances to be authorized by ordinance the public is assured adequate notice and an opportunity to complain about any particular conveyance. Each conveyance transaction should be carefully reviewed by the council and by the city attorney. This disposal ordinance allows the council to be as free or as restrictive as possible with any particular conveyance and the facts of each particular situation will dictate how free or how restrictive a council should be. My recommendation, and the policy I used at St. Marys, is to use a lease wherever possible, particularly when the property to be conveyed was to an outside business or commercial interest. A lease is preferable because the city retains ownership.

I want to convey to both you and Laura my appreciation for being selected for this project. I hope the material and information I have provided will be useful and please don't hesitate to contact me if you require additional information or advice.

MUNICIPAL LAND ACQUISITION AND DISPOSAL IN ALASKA

I. INTRODUCTION

Rarely do local governments have the opportunity to acquire at no cost large undeveloped tracts of land. In Alaska, municipalities have been the beneficiaries of several important pieces of legislation which provide for transfers of property to municipal ownership. The first such law was the State land grant program, which allowed municipalities to select State owned land within the municipal boundary¹. More important for the future, however, are the Alaska Native Townsite Act (ANTA) and Section 14(c)(3) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA).²

The possession of this undeveloped land creates a conveyance problem for local governments. If municipalities retain these conveyances for public use, local community development could be severely inhibited. It will be incumbent upon municipalities in the future to convey portions of municipal land holdings into private ownership. Municipalities, however, do not enjoy the same freedom in the real estate market as private individuals. A number of legal obstacles must be avoided in order to convey municipal property to private individuals; these obstacles multiply when municipal officials attempt to implement public policy through the vehicle of land disposal. This paper analyzes some of the more significant legal obstacles and highlights some common conveyance problems municipalities may face. Particular attention is given to the unique context of small rural municipalities.

II. ALASKA STATUTES 29.35.090

Municipalities as political subdivisions of the state derive only those powers granted by state government. Conveyances of property received by municipalities, regardless of the intent of the granting legislation, must comply with authority granted by state law.³ The first legal obstacle is the nature of the power granted by the state. In Alaska this power is granted in AS § 29.35.010(8) which simply states that all municipalities have the power "to acquire, manage, control, use and dispose of real and personal property" The power to acquire and dispose of land is limited by AS § 29.35.090, which states: "The governing body shall by ordinance establish a formal procedure for acquisition and disposal of land and interests in land by the municipality." AS 29.35.090 is one of the significant changes enacted in the major revision of Title 29 passed by the Alaska legislature in 1985. ⁴ The predecessor to AS 29.35.090 strictly confined the municipal power to dispose of land⁵. The comprehensive nature of the change represents a complete reversal of the legislative attitude toward municipal land conveyance. The change also presents important questions of legal interpretation.

A. Legislative History of AS 29.35.090

The law on municipal land conveyances prior to the enactment of the Title 29 revision was found at AS 29.48.260. This statute limited municipalities to disposing land "no longer required for municipal purposes."⁶ The governing body was also required to establish a formal procedure for the disposal of property that must include "A number of legal obstacles must be avoided in order to convey municipal property to private individuals; these obstacles multiply when municipal officials attempt to implement public policy through the vehicle of land disposal."

provisions for property appraisals by qualified appraisers, thirty days public notice prior to any conveyance, conveyance only by auction or sealed bid, and voter ratification of any conveyance of property valued at $25,000 or more.⁷ Exceptions to these limitations were made for conveyances to other governments,⁸ conveyances of property originally acquired from the state⁹ and conveyances to persons who agreed to "operate a beneficial new industry" on the property conveyed.¹⁰

AS 29.35.090 completely sweeps aside all the restrictions of the prior law. However, because AS 29.35.090 is but one part of a major revision of the statutory law governing Alaska local governments, the legislative history surrounding this particular change is limited. In 1980 the state legislature established a committee to review the existing statutory law governing municipalities and to recommend appropriate changes.¹¹ One of the primary goals of the committee was to simplify procedures and to maximize local control over local affairs.12 The committee considered the then existing statute governing municipal land disposal as creating "undue complexities" and recommended a simple requirement that municipalities establish a procedure by ordinance.¹³ The committee particularly desired to eliminate the $25,000 value limit for voter ratification because it was unrealistic.14

Although the revisions to Title 29 recommended by the committee took several years to pass through the legislature,¹⁵ AS 29.35.090 survived unchanged and apparently stirred little controversy or comment in legislative committees or on the floor of either house. It can therefore be assumed the legislature intended that local governments in Alaska should be as free as possible to decide for themselves how land should be acquired and disposed.

B. Interpretative Effect of a Comprehensive Change

The question raised is whether the sweeping nature of the change permits municipalities to dispose of property, with all the discretion and freedom a private person would have. The answer to this question will likely depend upon the weight the Alaska courts accord to the common law rules governing municipal property disposal. Courts generally construe a repeal of a statute as reviving the common law as it existed before the statute was enacted.¹⁶ The repeal of the prior restrictive statute on municipal land disposal and its replacement with a broad grant of authority could therefore mean that governing bodies are not entirely free to dispose of property as they see fit but are now restricted to the extent those restrictions are found at common law.

III . COMMON LAW PRINCIPLES APPLICABLE TO MUNICIPAL PROPERTY

The common law power of a municipality to acquire and dispose of land is constructed on a distinction between land held in a proprietary capacity and land held in a governmental capacity.¹⁷ The common law recognized that local governments acted in two different capacities, one which is governmental and the other which is private or corporate.¹⁸ Powers incident to the former include the power to regulate, police and collect taxes; the latter include primarily the authority to provide public services such as water, sewer and harbors.¹⁹ Land that was acquired or dedicated by a municipality to promote a governmental responsibility is considered public land and must be used for the purposes for which it was devoted.²⁰ At common law "public land" could only be disposed if the municipality was granted specific authority to do so by the state.²¹ However, land acquired and owned by the municipality for the purpose of promoting a distinctly corporate function is considered "private land" and can be disposed by the governing body without special authority from the state.²² The theory is that the state grants a municipality the power to incorporate and by the terms of its creation a municipality possesses the same capacity to dispose of property that an individual has who possesses the authority to contract.23

The distinction between the two "capacities" of a local government is often academic and difficult to apply in particular situations.²⁴ It is unclear whether the Alaska courts have adopted this distinction between privately held and publicly held property for the purpose of determining the authority of a municipality to acquire and dispose property. Now that the former statutory restrictions imposed by statute have been removed the leading case in Alaska may be Seltenreich v. Town of Fairbanks decided in 1953.25 In Seltenreich the U.S. District Court for Alaska drew heavily upon the governmental - proprietary distinction to determine whether the city government had properly conveyed a tract of land formerly used as an airport. Quoting extensively from secondary sources the court said:

The general rule ... is that property held in a governmental capacity, i.e. for a public use, cannot be sold without legislative authority ... but is otherwise as to property held in a private capacity and not devoted to any special public use.²⁶ The court stated that property held by a municipal corporation in its proprietary capacity ordinarily may be alienated without the consent of the legislature.²⁷ On appeal, the Ninth Circuit affirmed but considered the distinction between governmental and proprietary capacities unnecessary to its affirmation.²⁸ The Ninth Circuit drew upon statutory language providing that a city council could dispose of public property no longer required for municipal purposes to uphold the decision of the Fairbanks City Council to convey the airport property.²⁹

The only other case found in Alaska touching upon the character in which a municipality may hold property is Libby v. *City of Dillingham.*⁵⁰ In Libby, the Alaska Supreme Court in dicta stated: "... the general rule is that municipalities may acquire and hold land only for a public purpose."⁵¹ If, in this short statement, the Alaska Supreme Court has dismissed the common law distinction between holding land in a governmental capacity and holding land in a proprietary capacity significant implications may result.

These implications become apparent when considered in light of the legislative grants under which Alaskan local governments have acquired land.

"The question raised is whether the sweeping nature of the change permits municipalities to dispose of property, with all the discretion and freedom a private person would have. The answer to this question will likely depend upon the weight the Alaska courts accord to the common law rules governing municipal property disposal.

IV. MUNICIPAL LAND ACQUISITION IN ALASKA

Prior to the passage of ANCSA many municipalities acquired title to undeveloped property through the state land grant program. This program entitled municipalities to select up to ten percent of the vacant unappropriated state selected land within the municipal boundary.³² The intent of the land grant program was to allow for public and private settlement and development of local land.³³ Although the land grant program remains available, most municipalities in the state incorporated shortly before or after the passage of ANCSA and do not have access to the program. Most of the land within the boundaries of municipalities incorporated since 1971 was selected by local village corporations under ANCSA and is no longer available for state selection under the Statehood Act for possible reconveyance to the municipality. For the vast number of municipal governments the acquisition of undeveloped land will come directly from the federal government pursuant to ANTA, or as the result of the federal obligation imposed by ANCSA on village corporations to reconvey certain land to municipal corporations.

A. Alaska Native Townsite Act

Although the Alaska Native Townsite Act was repealed in 1976,⁵⁴ it nevertheless remains a significant source of undeveloped land for municipalities. The ANTA permitted unincorporated Native communities to petition the federal government to survey their community and give deeds to residents of the community.³⁵ Provision was also made in the law to set aside land for such public uses as cemeteries.³⁶ After surveys were completed, municipalities were given title to property set aside in the plan of survey for municipal reserve; municipalities can also obtain title to all vacant lots in subdivided portions of townsites.³⁷ As a result of recent litigation, municipalities can also receive title to all unsubdivided portions of a townsite survey.³⁸

Vacant lots, unsubdivided portions of townsite surveys and possibly even land designated for municipal reserve can be considered land transferred to the municipality to provide for future residential growth. Few municipalities, if any, consider this property to be obtained solely for governmental use.

B. Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act

Municipalities whose jurisdictions include land selected by an ANCSA village corporation are entitled under Section 14(c)(3) of that act to select land needed for community expansion, public rights-of-way and for "other foreseeable community needs."³⁹ Under the original Act, municipalities were entitled to "no less than 1280 acres."40 The Act was amended by the Alaska Lands Act and now the amount of acreage received by a municipality is determined through negotiation between the municipality and the local village corporation, although the operative figure is still 1280 acres.⁴¹ The intent of this provision is not to deprive the local village corporation of potential profitable uses for its property and arguably the only land that should be transferred to a municipality under Section 14(c)(3) is land needed for public use. Most of the land to be selected under this provision should be to accommodate recognized public uses such as community buildings, rights-of-ways, cemeteries and waste disposal sites.⁴² Whether a municipality could select land for future residential development, and whether a village corporation could deny such a claim, are open questions.

Residential development is one of the few potential profit making opportunities available to a village corporation. However, because many people in Alaska's villages live on the margins of poverty few people may be able to afford lots sold for fair market value. Villagers often cannot compete with outside interests for valuable residential land. City governments concerned about the availability of land for local residents may seek to select land from the village corporation to fulfill this perceived community need, and such a selection would appear to be justified under the "community expansion" provision of Section 14(c)(3). Several partial 14(c)(3)reconveyances in rural villages have already been spurred by the need to provide land for federal public housing projects.⁴³ To date rural municipalities have shouldered the burden of providing land for residential development.

C. Other Sources of Undeveloped Land

Some municipalities have received land grants from other sources. The Railroad Townsite Act and the Presidential Townsite Act have benefited communities located on the Alaska Railroad or the highway system.⁴⁴ The provisions of these acts are similar to ANTA. A few communities that grew around missions and later incorporated received land from churches. Much of this land was deeded without restriction as to use.⁴⁵

V. POSSIBLE LIMITATIONS IN ALASKA ON THE COMMON LAW OF MUNICIPAL PROPERTY DISPOSAL

Several limitations on the common law rules governing municipal land conveyances may exist in Alaska. Most of these potential limitations are found in the Alaska Constitution, the most important of which is the public purpose clause.

A. Public Purpose Clause of the Alaska Constitution

The public purpose clause of the Alaska Constitution is found at Article IX, Section 6 and is important because it specifically provides that "public property" may not be transferred "except for a public purpose." The Supreme Court said in Libby that all property acquired by the municipality is acquired for a public purpose and arguably this statement dismisses the common law distinction between private purpose and public purpose property.⁴⁶ The immediate hurdle such a rule presents is whether the general authority to dispose property granted by state statute is specific enough to allow for the disposal of property acquired for a public purpose.⁴⁷ Ordinarily a general power to sell property is not construed to authorize the sale of property held in a governmental capacity, although authorities differ on this question.⁴⁸ The rule is generally the opposite with respect to the authority to sell property held in a proprietary capacity.⁴⁹ In light of the Constitutional direction that municipal powers in Alaska are to be construed liberally, the courts in Alaska would probably consider the general grant of authority sufficient to dispose of municipal property regardless of its governmental or proprietary character.⁵⁰ However, even if the distinction is valid for the purpose of a general authority to dispose, a problem still exists if all municipal property can only be disposed for a public purpose. The language in Libby could be read to impose such a limitation. The question is important because, as discussed above, much of the undeveloped land, which may be acquired by municipalities, should be developed, subdivided and conveyed to private individuals or organizations for residential or commercial purposes. Results may differ depending upon whether the Court focuses on the "public" in public land or the "public" in public purpose of Article IX, Section 6.

"Most of the land within the boundaries of municipalities incorporated since 1971 was selected by local village corporations under ANCSA and is no longer available for state selection under the Statehood Act or possible reconveyance to the municipality."

The Alaska Supreme Court accords a very generous construction to the term "public purpose⁵¹"; a legislative determination that a public purpose is served has a strong presumption of legality.52 The court has said on several occasions that it will not interfere with such a legislative finding unless it clearly appears the finding is arbitrary and without any reasonable basis in fact.53 The court has also declined the invitation to define "public purpose" preferring to leave definitions to the particular facts presented by each case.⁵⁴ It is clear that not all members of the public need to benefit in order for a public purpose to be sustained; nor is a public purpose defeated simply because a private entity will realize a significant advantage.⁵⁵ However, a public purpose may not be recognized when that purpose is merely incidental.⁵⁶ It appears the Alaska courts may be using a sliding scale approach to the public purpose question. If the stated public purpose is a legitimate public purpose then the particular conveyance will be placed on the scale and a determination made in light of the facts of each case whether the public purpose is served significantly or merely incidentally.

Most municipal land conveyances are likely to satisfy the public purpose test. However, a conveyance of land to an individual which the individual will use to the exclusion of all others in the community is arguably not a conveyance for a public purpose. A conveyance of property to a corporation whose purpose is merely commercial is arguably not a conveyance for a public purpose. Each of these conveyances may promote the general purpose of community development, but the connection is only tangential and the Alaska court could void the conveyance. The Alaska legislature apparently recognized the private nature of such conveyances in the former law on municipal land disposal when it specifically recognized exceptions for conveyances of land acquired from the state and for land to be conveyed to a beneficial new industry.⁵⁷

A municipality is arguably not the intended beneficiary of all the land transferred to it under ANTA or ANCSA. The municipality has an obligation to transfer some of this land into private ownership. The critical question is whether the public purpose clause will defeat such transfers into private ownership despite the apparent intent of ANTA or ANCSA. The answer is uncertain. Many rural communities suffer from depressed and cyclical economies and from housing shortages and overcrowding.⁵⁸

For the immediate future municipal governments in many communities may be the only entity that can make land available for private residential or commercial development. The court may consider these surrounding facts to find a public purpose adequately served despite the fact a private individual is the primary beneficiary.

The alternative argument is that a public purpose inquiry is not relevant when the land at issue is held by the municipality for the purpose of accommodating private residential or commercial development. Such land is arguably held in the proprietary capacity of the municipality and is not affected with the incidents of a trust to make the land "public land" for purposes of Article IX, Section 6. Unfortunately, the only case in Alaska that may support this reasoning is Seltenreich, which was decided prior to statehood.⁵⁹

VI. CONSTITUTIONAL LIMITATIONS ON DISCRIMINATORY CONVEYANCES

Assuming the public purpose clause of the Alaska constitution will not prevent a conveyance of municipal property into private ownership, the equal protection clauses of the Alaska Constitution and the United States Constitution may still pose significant hurdles. Land is a finite resource and the demand for it is potentially infinite. As a practical matter, municipalities will often need to limit the number of people who can acquire municipal property. Restricting eligibility is an inherently discriminatory act creating a class of people who can receive a government benefit and a class of people who cannot. The creation of these two classes may be subject to analysis by the courts under the equal protection clauses of the two constitutions.⁶⁰

Conveying land is fundamentally a resource allocation problem and the simplest legally acceptable means for conveying property is to permit the market system to determine eligibility. Property is simply conveyed to the individual offering the highest price. The prior provisions of Title 29 by requiring auctions or bids and fair market value as the basis for establishing price essentially allowed the market to determine who could acquire municipally disposed land.⁶¹ Because the market system is competitive, it theoretically provides an equal opportunity to all who desire to acquire the particular resource. In reality, however, the market system allocates resources on the basis of wealth and can result in discrimination against the less fortunate members of society. Government intervention is often necessary to correct this inherent imbalance. And so, local governments in Alaska have implemented land disposal laws that compromise the competitive aspect of the market system in favor of some particular group. Such government supported favoritism incurs the risk of falling into the legal tar pit of equal protection.

Among the more popular limits placed upon eligibility to acquire municipal land is the restriction of local residency. Other restrictions imposed or considered by municipalities include sale procedures that favor low-income persons, non-landowners, long-time residents, heads of households and Alaska Natives.

An examination of these classifications under the microscope of equal protection must begin with an understanding of the context in which many of them are found: that context is rural Alaska. Alaska is predominately a rural state and most of its communities are small, relatively homogenous communities.⁶² Many of these communities have populations that are predominately Alaska Native.⁶³ Many have a history in a particular location dating back thousands of years.

The justification for restricting eligibility to acquire municipal land can be varied. Most rural residents live at or below the poverty level and depend upon seasonal employment and a subsistence lifestyle.⁶⁴ If a municipality allows the market to determine who can purchase property a good possibility exists

"It is clear that not all members of the public need to benefit in order for a public purpose to be sustained; nor is a public purpose defeated simply because a private entity will realize a significant advantage."

"A municipality is arguably not the intended beneficiary of all the land transferred to it under ANTA or ANCSA. The municipality has an obligation to transfer some of this land into private ownership. The critical question is whether the public purpose clause will defeat such transfers into private ownership despite the apparent intent of ANTA or ANCSA.

that much of the property sold could fall into the hands of wealthier people who have no real stake in the community. Many rural communities also have significant transient populations made up primarily of seasonal workers, government employees or teachers.65 These temporary residents often hold the best paying positions in the community and tend to be financially better-off than most permanent residents.66 A municipality that cannot limit its land conveyances to bonafide residents may preside over the demise of the community as land holdings become increasingly controlled by nonresidents. For communities that are primarily Native the consequences are particularly significant. Political control of the community may be at stake because relative wealth in rural areas tends to favor non-Natives.67

It has been and is likely to continue to be important for many rural municipalities to control who can acquire land from municipal holdings and to make land available on terms within the financial reach of local residents.

A. The Federal Equal Protection Standard

The Federal courts nearly always uphold legislative classifications distinguishing between persons who are similarly situated when the distinctions drawn do not involve a "suspect classification" like race⁶⁸ or restrict the exercise of a fundamental right like voting⁶⁹ or impinge upon a basic necessity of life like access to welfare or health care benefits.⁷⁰ If the distinctions drawn fall into one of these categories, the federal courts will apply a strict scrutiny standard and require a "compelling state interest" to justify the classification.⁷¹ Also the distinction drawn must be necessary to accomplishing the goal.⁷² However, if a classification falls outside the sphere of strict scrutiny, the federal courts will only require a rational relationship between the classification and the goal to be achieved.⁷³ The inquiry follows a two-tier analysis.⁷⁴

B. The Alaska Equal Protection Standard

The standard of review for classifications under the equal protection clause of the Alaska constitution is a means-end test and is considerably more rigorous than the standard applied by the federal courts.⁷⁵ The Alaska standard was firmly established in State v. Erickson⁷⁶ and generally requires a determination 1) whether the classification is aimed at fulfilling a legitimate government purpose; 2) If so, whether the classification bears a fair and substantial relationship to the stated government purpose; and 3) whether the importance of the government purpose served by the classification outweighs the deprivation of any rights caused by the classification.77 When fundamental federal rights or suspect categories are involved, the results of the Alaska test will be essentially the same as requiring a compelling state interest.78 However, under the Alaska test, the rights involved need not be fundamental in order for a classification to fail; the classification is balanced against the "importance" of the right in question.⁷⁹ Also, of particular significance, the Alaska courts, unlike their federal counterparts, will not hypothesize a legitimate government goal in order to sustain a relationship between the classification and the goal. The Alaska courts will only look to the articulated goals of the legislation in question and determine whether the relationship between the classification and the articulated goal is rational.⁸⁰

91 Appendix 2B

VII. CONSTITUTIONALITY OF CLASSIFICATIONS RESTRICTING ELIGIBILITY TO ACQUIRE MUNICIPAL PROPERTY

A. Residency

The history of Alaska has been marked by government policies granting residential preferences. These preferences have been the subject of considerable public attention and judicial scrutiny. Most residential preferences have not survived the close examination of the Alaska Supreme Court.⁸¹ However, despite the number of Alaska cases discussing residency requirements; the law relating to their validity is far from settled. The Alaska equal protection standards under which a residency requirement will be examined are broad enough to allow a court to reach nearly any decision it desires.

Residency as a basis for eligibility to acquire a government benefit can be either "simple" or "durational." To the extent the law in question grants a benefit to a resident as opposed to a non-resident, without reference to any prior length of residency, it can be deemed a "simple" residency requirement. If, however, the law grants a benefit to individuals based upon prior length of residency it may be a "durational" residency requirement. The distinction can be critical: a durational requirement is more likely to invoke a strict scrutiny equal protection examination.

The first question to resolve, however, is whether any residency requirement attached to a municipal land conveyance can be valid. The leading case considering the constitutionality of a residency requirement in a municipal land conveyance is *Gilman v. Martin*⁸² in which the Alaska Supreme Court struck down a land sale conducted by the Kenai Peninsula Borough.

Appendix Two B

The sale procedure adopted by the Borough incorporated a one year residency requirement to establish eligibility for land purchase.83 The Borough also discounted the sale price five percent for each year of residency in the Borough up to a maximum fifty percent discount.⁸⁴ These preferences in the sale procedure were adapted from similar preferences granted to state residents in land sales conducted by the Alaska Department of Natural Resources.⁸⁵ The ordinance authorizing the land sale at issue in Gilman stated the purpose of the sale was to sell selected parcels to "adjoining property owners or to leaseholders so as to resolve existing controversies regarding access and title."86 The court reviewed the classification (residency) in relation to the stated purpose of the sale (to resolve controversies regarding access and title) and held the sale violated the proscriptions of equal protection because the classification "did not bear a substantial relation to the purpose of the ordinance."87

The purpose of the sale was the initial focus of the court's inquiry. In Gilman, the Borough argued it could distinguish residents from non-residents because the intent of the initial grant of land from the state to the Borough was to permit residents to acquire land.⁸⁸ The court noted, however, this was not the stated purpose of the legislation and held the residency requirement bore no relationship to the purpose of resolving controversies regarding access and title because a majority of landowners within the Borough were non-residents.⁸⁹ Residents and non-residents had similar problems with access and title and were thus "similarly circumstanced." There was no rational reason to deny non-residents the benefits of the sale.90

An examination of these classifications under the microscope of equal protection must begin with an understanding of the context in which many of them are found: that context is rural Alaska, Alaska is predominately a rural state and most of its communities are small, realtively homogenous communities.

"A municipality that cannot limit its land conveyances to bonafide residents may preside over the demise of the community as land holdings become increasingly controlled by non-residents."

The Court intimated in Gilman that its decision may have been different if the Borough had stated in its ordinance that the purpose of the sale was to benefit residents.⁹¹ However, in a footnote the court quoted from Justice Brennan's concurring opinion in Zobel v. Williams92 in which he stated that "discrimination on the basis of residence must be supported by a valid... interest independent of the discrimination itself." 93 In most cases it will likely be difficult to conceptually distinguish the validity of the interest from the validity of the discrimination. It is unclear how the court would have decided the case if the articulated purpose of the sale in Gilman was to benefit residents.

Municipalities are organized by and exist for the purpose of benefiting their residents, and a land sale limited to residents is probably not a violation of equal protection. Any person is entitled to become a resident and, once a resident, have equal access to the benefits provided by the municipality. The major equal protection problem likely to occur with a residency requirement is whether the length of time a person has lived inside the municipal boundary is used to determine whether a person is or is not a resident. Time can be used to test for the "bonafides" of residency, but the longer the length of time, the more a residency requirement will look like a durational gualification.94

At one time durational residency requirements triggered the "strict scrutiny" of the Alaska courts which realistically meant that any legislative classification based upon length of residency would not survive challenge.⁹⁵ When the Alaska Supreme court in *State v Erickson*⁹⁶ rejected the traditional "two-tier" equal protection test of the United States Supreme Court in favor of a single test, the stage was set for a reconsideration of durational residency requirements. In Williams v. Zobel the court held durational residency requirements would no longer be automatically subject to strict scrutiny, but would be measured against the Erickson standard.⁹⁷ The burden is placed on the government to demonstrate that any durational classification is related to a legitimate government objective.⁹⁸

It is apparent from Gilman that the use of the Erickson standard will not materially change the result that most durational residency requirements will fail. In Gilman the court held the residency discount scheme based on length of residency did not rationally further any legitimate state purpose.⁹⁹ Durational residency requirements are always likely to fail because legitimate government purposes for establishing such requirements are rare, or will impinge upon the federally protected right to travel.¹⁰⁰

Although the standards used by the court to determine the validity of a residency requirement limiting access to municipal land conveyances are broad enough to allow for almost any decision, there are certain steps a municipality can take to minimize the risk of judicial rejection.

First, a residency requirement should not make reference to prior length of residency. If a time reference is desirable it should remain short. A thirty day requirement will probably not be questioned; a longer requirement should be justifiable in the context of the community. The time reference should only be used to determine who is a resident, not to distinguish among residents. A problem in many rural communities is that populations fluctuate with the seasons. The summer may draw a transient population of seasonal workers, and the winter is ushered in by the return of teachers. A requirement of physical presence in the community for a period longer than thirty days may be justified to eliminate these persons who are not true inhabitants of the community.

A simple residency requirement in which determinations of eligibility are based upon a person's domicile, without reference to prior length of residency, is probably the best course to follow. Domicile is often described as a "bonafide" residence; it contains an objective requirement of physical presence and a subjective intent requirement.¹⁰¹ A simple residency requirement will likely increase the administrative burden of determining who is and who is not a resident, but this burden must be weighed against the possibility that a time reference will create a questionable durational requirement and increase the possibility the land conveyance will be challenged.

Second, cities should not become too preoccupied with pre-conveyance eligibility requirements because the same goal can often be achieved with post-conveyance restrictions. Contracts or deeds that require the construction of a habitable dwelling within a prescribed period or limiting sales to one lot per person reduce the likelihood of land speculation. Easier payment terms for low income persons will make it easier for most rural residents to purchase property. Options of first refusal allow the City to limit the amount of property owned in the community by non-residents. These post-conveyance restrictions are not clouded with the legal uncertainty of pre-conveyance eligibility requirements because they are elements of the bargain that do not preclude a person's option to participate.¹⁰²

Third, each conveyance authorization should have a clear legislative history. The Alaska Supreme Court has made it clear under the Erickson equal protection standard that articulated reasons supporting a classification will provide the focus for judicial inquiry. The courts will no longer hypothesize conceivable legislative purposes or imaginable facts to sustain classifications.¹⁰³ If the legislative record does not reveal a legitimate purpose, or in the case of residency, does not reveal a legitimate purpose other than benefiting residents, the court may reject the conveyance. A governing body can create a legislative history by incorporating detailed findings into its resolutions or ordinances. The findings should set forth the local problems which the eligibility requirement addresses and the reasons the governing body believes the requirements selected will be effective. A record in the form of minutes or recorded testimony from public hearings can also help demonstrate that the findings are based upon reasonable perceptions of community needs.

Fourth, the relationship between the classification and the legislative purpose should be clear. If the primary purpose of a land sale is to raise money for the city or increase the local property tax base, residency becomes an irrelevant classification. If, as is the case in many rural communities, the city desires to make land available to relieve overcrowding in existing homes, residency has a clear relationship to purpose.

B. Other Eligibility Requirements

The analysis of any eligibility requirement for a government benefit will suffer the same equal protection analysis as residence. Restricting government benefits to low income people has always been recognized as a legitimate government purpose¹⁰⁴ and restricting a land conveyance or granting price relief to low income persons would probably be sustained. Conveying land to a local housing authority for the development of low income housing should also survive judicial scrutiny.¹⁰⁵ To the extent overcrowding is a legitimate community problem, a strong argument can be made that relieving overcrowding is an objective important enough to justify depriving persons who already have property from obtaining additional acreage.

C. Restricting Conveyances to Alaska Natives

Most rural communities are predominately populated by Alaska Natives and in recent years many of these communities have become concerned about the future of Native control and influence in their own communities.¹⁰⁶ A critical focus of this concern is land. If non-Natives are permitted to own land in the community the Native character of the village will diminish and Natives may potentially lose political control of the community.¹⁰⁷ This phenomenon is already apparent in many of the state's larger regional centers. The village is central to most of the Native cultures in the state and its loss may be tantamount to loss of the culture. To combat this trend some Native villages have been examining alternatives for preserving Native control, including restricting municipal land conveyances to Natives.¹⁰⁸

Federal programs benefiting Natives generally survive equal protection scrutiny because the federal constitution endorses a "special relationship" between Natives and the Federal government.¹⁰⁹ This special relationship is political and not based on racial distinctions.¹¹⁰ The Alaska constitution, however, does not recognize a similar relationship and the state attorney general has taken the position that a state classification favoring Alaska Natives cannot be sustained under the equal protection analysis of Alaska law.¹¹¹

Following the attorney general's opinion, the Alaska Supreme Court issued a decision, McDowell v. State, 112 which cast further doubt on the ability of the state or its political subdivisions to make preferential land disposals to Alaska Natives. In McDowell, the court struck down a rural preference (which operated in practice as a Native preference) to take fish and game resources for subsistence purposes under Article VIII, Sections 2, 15 and 17 of the Alaska Constitution. Article VIII, Sections 17, the uniform application clause (discussed separately below), is directly relevant to land disposals by the state and municipalities. The court in McDowell noted that this section of the constitution may require even "more stringent review" of a [statute or ordinance] than does the equal protection clause in cases involving natural resources.¹¹³ Thus, the bar against restricting municipal conveyances only to Alaska Natives is likely set higher than originally contemplated by the attorney general.

D. Conveyance to a Tribal Organization

Most rural municipalities also have federally recognized tribal governments within their jurisdiction that serve the same Native population. Many of these tribal governments are organized under the Indian Reorganization Act¹¹² and are capable of receiving title to real property. An alternative to conveying property to Native individuals is a conveyance to the tribal government for reconveyance to tribal members. Again, the state attorney general has taken the position that such conveyances are prohibited by the Alaska constitution unless the conveyances contain restrictions to assure the property conveyed will be used for public purposes on a nondiscriminatory basis.¹¹³ And again, the McDowell decision suggests that restricting municipal conveyances to grantees based upon their tribal status would likely run afoul of both the equal protection and uniform application clauses of the Alaska Constitution.

VIII. ALASKA CONSTITUTION, ARTICLE VIII, SECTION 17

Article VIII, Section 17 of the Alaska constitution may be the sleeper in the entire debate surrounding the Alaska equal protection standard and municipal land conveyances. The provision states: "Laws and regulations governing the use and disposal of natural resources shall apply equally to all persons similarly situated with reference to the subject matter and purpose to be served by the law or regulation." The records of the Alaska Constitutional Convention provide no clue as to the precise meaning of the provision but the Alaska Supreme Court in Gilman intimated the provision may require that any restrictive classification attached to a municipal land conveyance may have to withstand "stringent review" under the equal protection clause of the Alaska Constitution.¹¹⁴ Accordingly, any municipal land conveyance that is not made available equally to all residents of the state, certainly to all residents of the municipality, may have to be justified by a compelling interest, and the fit between the means and the interest served will have to be very close. As discussed above, the decision in McDowell strongly reinforces the foregoing analysis. Because disposals of municipal land necessarily implicate the uniform application clause, they face even more stringent review than ordinances that implicate the equal protection clause alone.

^{\'}Δ governing body can create a legislative history by incorporating detailed findings into its resolutions or ordinances. The findings should set forth the local problems which the eligibility requirement addresses and the reasons the governing body believes the requirements selected will be effective.

IX. OTHER RESTRICTIONS GOVERNING MUNICIPAL LAND DISPOSALS

A. Conveyance Required by Ordinance

The current statutes require only that a formal procedure governing municipal land acquisition and disposal be adopted by ordinance.¹¹⁵ At common law when general legislation is enacted by ordinance specific acts may be taken by resolution.¹¹⁶ If a state requires land be sold pursuant to procedure established by ordinance, then a municipality can authorize individual sales by resolution.¹¹⁷ However, this rule may not apply in Alaska. In Thomas v. Bailey¹¹⁸ the Alaska Supreme Court held that a conveyance of land was an "appropriation" for the purpose of determining whether the state could be forced by initiative to make land available to the public.¹¹⁹ The court, relying on the constitutional prohibition against using initiatives to force appropriations, held that the term "appropriations" did not refer exclusively to expenditures of money, but could include land particularly when, as in Alaska, land is a primary asset of the state treasury.¹²⁰

Alaska statutes require municipal appropriations to be authorized by ordinance.¹²¹ As such the Daily case is strong support for the proposition that each sale of land by a municipality must be authorized by ordinance. Sales approved by resolution or mere vote of the governing body may be voidable.

B. Conveyance for Fair Market Value

The general rule at common law is that a municipality has no power, unless conferred by constitution, statute, or charter to donate municipal money for private use to any individual or corporation having no connection with the municipality.¹²² The rule also applies to conveyances of municipal property, except that donations of municipal property are generally allowed when the conveyance will further a public purpose and will promote the general public welfare.¹²³ Also, donations of property held in a governmental capacity have been upheld when the donation was made to another government or to a charitable institution and the property would continue to be used in a manner consistent with the public welfare.¹²⁴ Otherwise, it has been held that a municipality may not dispose of property without consideration.¹²⁵ However, donations have been upheld when made to satisfy an equitable claim, or claims founded in justice and supported by a moral obligation.126

The rule in Alaska is uncertain. Although the Court in Gilman could have addressed the issue whether the residency reduction offered by the Kenai Peninsual Borough constituted an unauthorized donation of the difference between the reduced price and fair market value, the issue was not presented.¹²⁷ The attorney general has taken the position that conveyances for less than fair market value are legal as long as there is some consideration, and the consideration is not so insignificant that the conveyance amounts to a gift.¹²⁸ The Alaska Supreme Court in Wright v. City of Palmer stated that it will generally defer to a legislative determination that a public purpose is served unless the particular act "amounted to the pledging of credit or the giving away of assets without any discernible benefit".129

Whether property conveyances can be made for less than fair market value is a concern to many rural municipalities. Such conveyances may often be necessary to clear title or to restore order to the community. The passage of ANCSA and the lawsuits holding up transfers under ANTA may have stopped land conveyances, but they did not stop community growth and expansion. The result is that many people moved onto and built on land whose eventual ownership was uncertain.¹³⁰ Now that municipalities may acquire much of this property there is pressure to convey such property to the occupants at no cost. Also, as discussed above, municipal councils are also concerned that conveyances for fair market value will make property in the community too expensive for many people in the community to purchase. The result is that younger people who have grown up in and have strong family ties to the community may not be able to acquire land in the community upon which to build homes and raise families.

Although the Alaska courts have not spoken on the issue, a case can be made that conveyances for less than fair market value are legal. The Alaska constitution provides that municipal powers are to be construed liberally.¹³¹ This provision was included to contravene the operation of the common law principle known as Dillon's rule, which essentially provides that a municipality has only those powers expressly granted by the legislature.¹³² The proceedings of the Constitutional Convention indicate the delegates intended municipalities to have any power not expressly prohibited by the constitution or the legislature.¹³³ As such, the power to dispose property should include the power to convey it for less than fair market value for any purpose so long as all persons similarly situated are treated equally. Such a power would also be consistent with other statements of policy in the constitution favoring settlement of the land.¹³⁴ To the extent a conveyance for less than fair market value can only be made to further a public purpose, the court's liberal view of "public purpose" may be large enough to encompass the concern of municipalities to make land available to local residents at an affordable price.135

Whether property conveyances can be made for less than fair market value is a concern to many rural municipalities. Such conveyances may often be necessary to clear title or to restore order to the community. The passage of ANCSA and the lawsuits holding up transfers under ANIA may have stopped land conveyances, but they did not stop community growth and expansion. The result is that many people moved onto and built on land whose eventual ownership, was uncertain.

Care should be taken to distinguish between the terms "public purpose" and "public use." The two terms are often used interchangeably, but "public use " is a more restrictive term. The discussion often arises in the context of eminent domain cases. A "public purpose" is often broad and can be satisfied if the public will generally be served; a "public use" contemplates a continuing measure of local government control and possessory use. See generally, 2A C. Antieau, Municipal Corporation Law, §§ 20.02 (1984).

SMITH: Mr. President, once again I don't have an amendment and I ask the question merely to get the Committee thinking into the record. Was it the intent of the Committee here to prohibit the sale of public property for other than public purposes? I see that you have here: "No tax shall be levied or appropriation of public money made or public property transferred, except for a public purpose." And, of course, in the resources article we make it possible to transfer property from the state public domain to private individuals. I simply wanted to either get this before Style and Drafting or get the Committee thinking on record. NERLAND: Mr. Smith, the committee took into consideration Section 9 of resources, and it was the feeling of the committee that the transfer of public property, when money was being received for it, would constitute a public purpose. It was not the intent of this Committee to interfere with the operation of your Section 9 in resources. 3 Proceeding of the Alaska Constitutional Convention at 2334.

Williams 457 U.S. 55, 70 (Brennan J. concurring) ("But those instances in which length of residence could provide a legitimate basis for distinguishing one citizen from another are rare") The right to travel is primarily the federal interest in free interstate migration. The Alaska Supreme Court has demonstrated some reluctance to recognize the existence of such a constitutionally protected right to travel preferring to construe some of the U.S. Supreme Court decisions on durational residency requirements as applying to other constitutionally protected rights. See Williams v. Zobel, 619 P.2d at 425. Although the U.S. Supreme Court did not specifically reverse the Alaska Supreme Court's decision in Williams v. Zobel on a right to travel basis, the underlying implication was that a violation of a right to travel occurred. See 457 U.S. 55 (separate opinions of Brennan J. and O'Conner J.).

Appendix Two C SAMPLE LAND DISPOSAL ORDINANCE

BE IT ENACTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL FOR THE CITY OF ALEKNAGIK THAT CHAPTER 4.3 and 4.4 OF TITLE IV OF THE CODE OF ORDINANCES OF THE CITY OF ALEKNAGIK ARE HEREBY REPEALED AND REPLACED WITH THE FOLLOWING NEW SECTION 4.3:

The ordinance approving the disposition may not be considered for passage at the same meeting at which the public hearing is held.

B. Fair market value may be determined from an appraisal prepared by a qualified appraiser or the city assessor, or the City Council may determine the fair market value by any other means it deems appropriate.

specifying that if no higher price is offered the land shall be conveyed pursuant to a pre-existing contract or lease at sale or lease at the minimum bid amount.

C. The City Council may invite proposals to purchase or lease real property for a fixed price. The invitation may specify the basis upon which proposals shall be evaluated, which may include but not be limited to the quality of the proposed development of the land and its benefit to the community, the qualifications and organization of the proposers, the value of the proposed improvement to the land and the rents or resale prices to be charged by the proposer.

D. City Council may dispose of real property by any other method not specifically prohibited by law.

Section 6. Exchange of Property

The City may exchange real property with any person for other property of equivalent fair market value. A determination of fair market value shall not he necessary if the exchange is with the United States, the State of Alaska or any political subdivision thereof, a non-profit corporation or association, or a recognized tribal authority and the City Council finds the exchange will allow the use of the real property for a public purpose beneficial to the City. Promissory Note

7) Deed of Trust

The Land Disposal Ordinance has been revised slightly to make it easier to read and understand. For example, the rules concerning who will be treated as a "resident," set forth in Section 8(c), have been clarified.

The specific non-code ordinance authorizing the land sale has been changed in two important ways. First, it now provides for voter ratification after it has been adopted by the Council. We are proposing to do this in order to avoid any possible legal question which might otherwise be raised, due to some comments in a Alaska Attorney General's opinion last year. To be absolutely safe, we believe that the Council should first adopt this ordinance, and then submit it to the voters as a ballot proposition for their approval. The voters will also see exactly which land will be offered for sale, what the minimum bid (based on estimated value) will be for each lot, and what procedures will be followed.

The second change in the specific sale ordinance involves the procedures for the sale. Rather than using resident preference rights, which would allow nonresidents to participate in the bidding subject to the right of residents to match the high bid, we have substituted a provision restricting participation in the land sale to residents only. In doing this, we are relying upon the Alaska Attorney General's opinion to which we have previously referred.

The authorizing ordinance and the instructions are written with a sealed bid auction procedure in mind. Remember that State law requires that the sealed bids be opened and tabulated in public. The best way to do this is to set a specific date and hour for the bid opening, and conduct it in a public meeting format.

We have also prepared a sworn statement of residency, to be submitted by each person who wants to submit a bid. You should review this carefully, along with Section 8(c) of the ordinance, to be sure that it makes sense to you and meets the community's wishes.

ORDINANCE

LEASING, SALE AND EXCHANGE OF CITY LAND

Sections:

- 1. Power to dispose of real property.
- 2. Form of document of conveyance.
- 3. Sale or lease by public auction.
- 4. Exchange of properties.

5. Procedures applicable for sales, leases and exchanges.

6. Financial terms.

7. Sale of present and after-acquired title or future interest in real property.

8. Preference rights and eligibility limitations for residents.

9. Leases, sales or grants to government agencies or public utilities.

Section 1. Power to dispose of real property.

The City may dispose of real property or interests therein, including future interests and after-acquired title, by sale, lease, exchange or other lawful means of conveyance, subject to the provisions of this chapter.

Section 2. Form of document of conveyance.

No disposal by the City of any interest in real property by any means shall be effective unless the procedure followed by the City complies with the requirements of this Chapter and the disposal is reflected in a document of conveyance which meets the following requirements:

(a) The document of conveyance must be in a recordable form permitted by state statute;

(b) The document of conveyance must be signed by the Mayor or, in the Mayor's absence, another City official designated in writing by the Mayor.

(c) The document of conveyance must contain a specific reference to the ordinance or resolution by which the City Council has authorized the conveyance to be made.

(d) The document of conveyance must be delivered by the City to its grantee or lessee at the time that the grant or lease is made.

Section 3. Sale or lease by public auction.

Unless otherwise provided in this chapter, and subject to the preference rights referred to in Section 8 of this chapter, the City may dispose of interests in real property only by sale or lease, at public auction, to the highest responsible bidder. The public auction may be conducted by the sealed bid method or by the outcry method. The method used shall be determined by the City Council and shall be set forth in the ordinance authorizing the sale or lease of City lands.

Section 4. Exchange of properties.

The preferred method of disposing of interests in City lands are lease and sale. The City may dispose of City property by exchanging it for other property only if both of the following conditions are met:

> (a) The Council determines, in findings set forth in its, resolution authorizing the exchange, that the property is not required for City purposes and that the interests of the City in disposing of the property would be better served by an exchange for other property than by a sale or lease; and

> (b) The Council determines that the property proposed to be conveyed to the City in exchange for the City's property is of equal or greater value than the City's property.

Section 5. Procedures applicable for sales, leases and exchanges.

When the City sells, leases or exchanges property, it must follow these procedures:

(a) An estimate of value shall be made by an appraiser or by the assessor. The Clerk may act as the assessor for the purpose of this Section. In the case of a sale or exchange, the estimate of value must be an estimate of the present fair market value of the property. If the proposed disposal is a lease, the estimate of value must be an estimate of both the present fair market value of the property and also the present fair market rental value of the property. Estimates of value may be based upon general information as to recent land sales or leases in Larsen Bay or nearby communities, and need not include detailed site-specific data or real estate market analysis. The estimated value shall be the minimum legally acceptable price for the property. The estimate of value must be reviewed and approved by the City Council prior to the conduct of any sale, lease, or exchange. This review and approval may be made by the Council at any time prior to the acceptance of high bids following their tabulation and review.

(b) Land of estimated value of under twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) shall be disposed of as follows:

(i) The Council must first enact an ordinance setting forth:

[a] A finding that the property proposed to be disposed of is not required for City purposes;

[b] A finding that the best interests of the City would be served by disposing of the land by sale, lease or exchange;

[c] If the Council determines that the land should be disposed of by exchange, additional findings as required by Section 4 of this chapter;

[d] The terms and conditions upon which the sale, lease or exchange will be conducted by the City.

(ii) Notice of the City's intent to dispose of the land, and of the manner by which the land is to be disposed of (i.e., by sale, lease or exchange, sealed bid or public outcry auction), shall be posted in at least three public places within the City for at least thirty days prior to the disposal. Notice may also be given by other means considered reasonable by the Mayor or Council. The notice must contain a brief description of the land, its area and general location, the minimum purchase or rental price, any terms or limitations concerning land, and the times and places set forth for the public outcry auction or sealed bid opening (if applicable) and for the exercise of preference rights to meet high bids.

(c) Disposal of City land valued at twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) or more shall be in the same manner prescribed in subsection (b) above, except that the ordinance authorizing the disposal must be ratified prior to the disposal by a majority of the qualified voters voting at a regular or special election at which the question of the ratification of the ordinance is submitted.. A notice stating the time of the election and the place of voting and describing the property to be disposed of and the terms and conditions of the disposal shall be posted in at least three public places in the City at least thirty (30) days before the election.

(d) A deed issued by the City in connection with any disposal under this Section shall be in the form of a statutory quitclaim deed.

Section 6. Financial terms.

Except in the case of an exchange, all disposals of City property under this section shall be for cash. The Council may provide by ordinance for the sale of property pursuant to an installment sale agreement or with a promissory note secured by a first deed of trust on the sale property. Rent on leases shall be payable quarterly or monthly, as the Council may determine. Any lease or installment purchase agreement issued by the City under this chapter must provide, among other terms and conditions, that upon a failure by the purchaser or lessee to make timely payment thereunder the contract or lease is terminated and all payments made thereunder are forfeited to the City.

Section 7. Sale of present and after-acquired title or future interest in real property.

The Council may authorize the sale of after-acquired title or future interests in real property to which the City is or may in the future become entitled. When this power is exercised, the ordinance and any deeds issued under this Section must contain a specific disclaimer of any warranty of title. A deed issued under this Section may also contain provision for issuance of a subsequent confirmatory quitclaim deed upon the request of the grantee at such future time as the City may obtain title to the land.

Section 8. Preference rights and eligibility limitations for residents.

(a) The Council may authorize the granting of preference rights to residents, as described in subsection (c) below, for any specific sale. If more than one resident preference right holder applies to purchase the same parcel, the competing preference right holders shall-submit sealed bids and the highest bidder shall be entitled to purchase the parcel at the price bid.

(b) Upon a finding by the Council that serious local residential housing needs require it, the Council may impose an eligibility requirement for a specific land sale. If the Council imposes this eligibility requirement, then the sale procedure shall provide that all prospective bidders qualify in advance of the sale by submitting sworn statements of residency to the Clerk. These statements of residency shall be available for public review. Any challenges to residency shall be determined by the Clerk, subject to appeal to the Council.

(c) A resident, for the purposes of this section, is a person who lives in Larsen Bay and has the present intent to make Larsen Bay his/her home and remain in Larsen Bay. Whether or not a person is a resident shall be decided based upon all of the facts concerning that person's living condition and intentions. A person who has maintained his/her dwelling and has physically resided in Larsen Bay continuously for a period of at least one-hundred twenty (120) days immediately preceding the filing of the sworn statement of residency shall normally be a resident. A person who has not resided in Larsen Bay continuously for a period of at least one-hundred twenty (120) days immediately preceding the filing of the sworn statement of residency shall normally be treated as a nonresident. If other facts show that a person having less than the required 120 days of residency is a resident, however, he/she may be treated as a resident. Likewise, if other facts show that a person having more than the required 120 days of residency is not a resident, he/she should not be treated as a resident.

Section 9. Leases, sales or grants to government agencies or public utilities.

The Council may provide by ordinance for the lease, sale or grant of City lands to a government agency or a public utility at less than its fair market value for use for a public purpose. The ordinance authorizing a public purpose lease, sale or grant must include a statement of the reasons why the Council has decided to dispose of the land for less than its fair market value.

AUTHORIZATION FOR SALE OF CERTAIN CITY LANDS

Be it resolved by the Council for the City of Larsen Bay as follows:

1. This non-code ordinance is adopted by the City Council pursuant to Section 3 of the City ordinance entitled "Leasing, Sale and Exchange of City Land" (adopted by the Council on______, 1984), for the purpose of authorizing the sale of certain City lands. After its adoption, this ordinance will be submitted to the voters for ratification as a ballot proposition at the next election.

2. The lands which are the subject of this ordinance are described on Appendix A. The City acquired these lands on [date] by a deed from the Townsite Trustee, United States Department of the Interior. Appendix A also lists the estimated value of each lot. The estimated value will be the minimum acceptable bid for the lot.

3. The Council has studied these lands and the existing and future land needs of the City and of its residents, and hereby finds that these lands are not required for City purposes and that the best interests of the City would be served by selling the lands. The Council also finds that there is an important public interest in encouraging Larsen Bay residents to become land owners in order to promote population stability.

4. The lands shall be sold at a sealed bid auction to be held by the City Clerk. Bids shall be accepted by the Clerk from [date and hour] until [date and hour]. The Clerk shall then publicly open and tabulate the bids on _____ [date] at _____ [hour].

5. The land sale will be restricted to prequalified residents only. Any resident, as that term is defined in Section 8(c) of the City's Land ordinance, may qualify to participate in the sale by submitting a sworn statement of residency with his/her sealed bid.

6. No one may purchase more than one lot at the sale.

7. Each lot purchaser will be required to pay at least twenty percent (20%) of the purchase price within five (5) days after the auction. If a purchaser fails to make this payment within five (5) days, he will lose his right to purchase the lot. The City will accept a promissory note for the balance of purchase price, up to a maximum of 80%, payable in equal annual installments with interest at the rate of twelve percent (12%) over a term of no more than ten (10) years. The promissory note will be secured by a first deed of trust on the lot.

8. Each deed issued by the City will contain the restriction that the lot may not be used for any purpose other than owner-occupied, single-household occupancy during the five years following the date of the auction.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR LARSEN BAY LAND SALE

The following is a step-by-step review of the procedures which should be followed by the City in order to prepare for and conduct the sale of City lands:

1. The Council must first adopt a general ordinance dealing with the sale, lease and exchange of City lands. This will be the framework for all future leases and sales. (A proposed ordinance is provided with these instructions.)

2. Now it is time for the City Council to adopt an ordinance authorizing the Mayor and the Clerk to go forward with the sale of the land which has been identified and subdivided. This non-code ordinance should explain what procedures will be followed in selling the land, what the terms of payment will be, what deed restrictions (if any) should be included, and what preference rights or eligibility limitations will be imposed. After the Council has adopted this ordinance, it should be submitted to the voters for ratification at the next election. (A sample sale ordinance is provided with these instructions.)

3. After the Council has adopted the sale ordinance and the voters have approved it, the Clerk or the Mayor should go forward with the required procedures. The first requirement is to post public notices in the community so that everyone will know about the sale and can decide whether to submit a bid on some land. The law does not require that this public notice be posted or published anywhere outside of the City.

4. The sale ordinance limits participation in the sale to residents only. The person who conducts the sale will have to make blank sworn statements of residency available for any resident who wants to participate in the sale. (A sample sworn statement of residency is provided with these instructions.) If there are any disputes about eligibility, those disputes can be decided by the City Council before the bids are approved and deeds are issued.

5. The next step is to hold the sale. The sale ordinance which is attached calls for what is referred to as a sealed bid auction procedure.

6. After the auction is over, the winning purchasers must pay the City for the land within five (5) days. A winner who does not pay within five (5) days loses his right to buy the lot. The lot will be held by the City, so it can be offered for sale again at a later land auction. The City will allow purchasers to "borrow" up to eighty percent (80%) of the purchase price from the City, by giving the City a promissory note and a deed of trust on the property. This will make it possible for the purchasers to buy the property for only twenty percent (20%) of its price and pay off the rest of the price with smaller annual payments over a ten-year period. When a purchaser makes his payment to the City (of twenty percent or more of the purchase price), the City should issue a deed to the lot to the purchaser and the purchaser should sign a promissory note and a deed of trust. (Samples of the deed, the promissory note and the deed of trust are provided with these instructions.) The City official conducting the sale should then record the deed and the deed of trust with the recording office, and give the purchaser copies of them.

7. Now that the land has been sold, the only thing left for the City to do is to keep track of payments received from the purchasers and to enforce the deed restrictions. In the sale ordinance and sample deed which are provided with these instructions, there is a deed restriction to prevent purchasers from using the lands for any purpose other than owner-occupied single-household residential use for the first five years after the sale. This does not force anyone to build a house. The purchaser could let the land sit vacant for five years, and then use it for some other purpose. During the first five years, however, only owner-occupied single-household residential use would be allowed. If someone violates this restriction, it will be the City's responsibility to take some action to do something about it.

8. If an owner sells his land before he has finished paying off the City for the purchase price, he should notify the City of the new owner so that the City can make sure that the new owner continues to make the payments. Normally, the original purchaser will still be obligated to make sure that the City is paid. That way, if the new owner does not pay then, the City should be able to go back to the original owner and get the money from him.

RE: LARSEN BAY LAND DISPOSAL PLAN

INTRODUCTION

You have requested a constitutional analysis of a land disposal program proposed for the City of Larsen Bay, Alaska. Briefly, the City wishes to convey municipally-held real estate at terms which are advantageous to its long-term residents. As you have described it, Larsen Bay currently has an acute housing shortage. The proposed land disposal program would encourage residents to build new homes to alleviate overcrowding.

Briefly, the City most likely may prefer its residents over non-residents if it disposes of municipally-owned real property. Residency should be defined by the more subjective test of domicile and/or by durational residency limited to a reasonable time period.

DISCUSSION

1. Generally.

Alaskan local governments justifiably are leery of imposing any residency or durational residency restrictions on programs, which might be construed as "public aid," programs, in the wake of recent Alaska Supreme Court decisions, several of which were analyzed further by the U.S. Supreme Court. However, the courts did not intend to delete residency restrictions, or for that matter durational residency requirements, from government assistance programs. Residency clearly may be imposed as a pre-requisite to program participation so long as a reasonable purpose is articulated and a rational nexus exists between the requirement and its purpose. Once residency presents a legitimate hurdle for program participation, a subjective domicile test clearly may be used to establish residency. A much harder question is whether a durational residency requirement also may be employed to test the "bona fides" of an individual's claim of Although duration residency. requirements arguably are subjected to more enhanced judicial scrutiny, even they are permissible so long as the governmental interest clearly out-weighs resultant interference with individual fundamental rights.

2. Residency Requirement.

An initial consideration is the extent to which a court will scrutinize classifications based on residency. As you know, the higher the level of analysis (e.g., strict scrutiny), the less likely it is that a reviewing court will favorably judge a classification scheme.

Alaska'a highest court has indicated it will apply the toughest test, the federal strict scrutiny standard (or "compelling state interest" test), in those instances where federal constitutional law would require it. Williams V. Zobel, 619 P2d 448, 453 (Alaska 1980) (hereinafter "Zobel II"). However, the same court made it clear in Gilman v. Martin, 662 P2d 120 (Alaska 1983), that it will not strictly scrutinize residency requirements:

> "The right to interstate or intrastate travel is impinged upon only when a governmental entity creates distinctions between residents based on the duration of their residency, and not when distinctions are created between residents and non-residents. (Citing McCarthy v. Philadelphia Civil Service Commission, 424 US 645, 96 SCt 1154, 47 LEd2d 366 (1976) and Memorial Hospital v. Maricopa County, 415 US 250, 255, 94 SCt 1076, 1080, 39 LEd2d 306, 313 (1974)).

> This does not mean that the residency requirement is free from scrutiny under the equal protection clauses of the United States and Alaska Constitutions; it only means that the requirement is not subject to the strict scrutiny applied when a fundamental right, such as some aspects of the right to interstate travel is at issue." 662 P2d at 125.

The Alaska court concluded in Gilman it would apply, "at a minimum," the more easily satisfied rational basis test. That test has been characterized in Isakson v. Rickey, 550 P2d 359, 362 (Alaska 1976) as follows:

"[T]he classification 'must be reasonable, not arbitrary, and must rest upon some ground of difference having a fair and substantial relation to the object of the legislation, so that all persons similarly circumstanced shall be treated alike."

Even if the federal rational basis standard is satisfied, a residency requirement still must pass under the equal protection clause of the Alaska Constitution. The Alaska Supreme Court prescribed a "sliding scale" test for state equal protection claims in State v. Erickson, 574 P2d 1 (Alaska 1978). The same court recently summarized the Erickson tset in State v. Ostrosky, 667 P2d 1184 (Alaska 1983):

> In contrast to the rigid tiers of federal equal protection analysis, we have postulated a single sliding scale of review ranging from relaxed scrutiny to strict scrutiny. The applicable standard of review for a given case is to be determined by the importance of the individual rights asserted and by the degree of suspicion with which we view the resulting classification scheme.¹³ As legislation burdens more fundamental rights, such as rights to speak and travel freely, it is subjected to more rigorous scrutiny at a more elevated position on our sliding scale. ***

> Having selected a standard of review on the Erickson sliding scale, we then apply it to the challenged legislation. This is done by scrutinizing the importance of the governmental interests which it is asserted that the legislation is designed to serve and the closeness of the means-to-ends fit between the legislation and interests. As the level of s those of scrutiny selected is higher on the Erickson scale, we require that the asserted governmental interests be relatively more compelling and that the legislation's means-to-ends fit be correspondingly closer. On the other hand, if relaxed scrutiny is indicated, less important governmental objectives will suffice and a greater degree of over/or underinclusiveness in the means-to-ends fit will be tolerated. (footnote omitted, emphasis added)

It is apparent from the emphasized language from Ostrosky that residency requirements are still subject to heightened scrutiny under state equal protection. Thus, the court's statement in Gilman that it would, "at a minimum," look to the rational basis standard articulated in Isakson, should not be given undue credit. At a maximum, "any residency requirement should be tailored to satisfy the upper end of the Erickson scale, which apparently is not far removed from a strict scrutiny stanard a residency requirement, such requirements in other Alaskan programs have run afoul of these simpler standards.

Gilman v. Martin, supra, is obviously critical to an analysis of the Larsen Bay plan. That case involved a lottery-type land distribution program in the Kenai Peninsula Borough. A borough ordinance required participants to have been borough residents for a year preceding their application. The stated purpose of the ordinance was to sell "certain parcels of Borough selected lands. . to adjoining property owners or to leaseholders so as to resolve existing controversies regarding access and title." 662 P2d at 126. Noting that 56 percent of all privately owned parcels in the Kenai Borough were owned by non-residents, the court concluded that the residency requirement violated even the minimal rational basis standard articulated in Isakson:

> "In view of the avowed purpose of the sale to 'resolve existing controversies regarding access and title' to properties, the decision of the Borough to restrict the sale of its land to Borough residents -- and thereby assist only forty-four percent of the land owners in resolving existing controversies regarding access and title -is a 'display of arbitrary power' rather 'an exercise of judgment.' The than classification is unreasonable and does not 'rest upon some ground of difference having a fair and substantial relation to the [avowed] object of the legislation, so that all persons similarly circumstanced [are] treated alike.' Isakson v. Rickey, 550 P2d at 362. (Quoting State v. Wylie, 516 P2d at 145.) We therefore agree with the Superior Court that Ordinance 79-53 is unconstitutional to the extent it requires participants to have been residents of the Borough at the time of their applications." 662 P2d at 126-127.

In dictum, the court stated that the residency requirement "might have been worthy of consideration if the Borough had stated . . that the purpose of the lottery was to benefit its residents." 652 P2d at 126. However, the court qualified this comment with the following footnote:

"We note, however, that 'discrimination on the basis of residence must be supported by a valid . . interest independent of the discrimination itself. Zobel III, 457 US 55, 70, 102 SCt 2309, 2318, 72 LEd2d 672, 684 (Brennan, J., concurring). Furthermore, as we indicated in Lynden Transport, Inc. v. State, 532 P2d 700, 711 (Alaska 1975), 'benefiting [the] economic interests of residents over non-residents is not a purpose which may constitutionally vindicate discriminating legislation. . .' We do not hold that residency requirements are per se invalid. At the least, however, when a purpose is stated for the requirement, the purpose must be a valid one that is substantially furthered by the classification." 662 P2d at 126 fn. 6.

It is evident from Gilman that a governmental entity must, at a minimum, have "substantial purpose" for preferring residents in land disposal programs. Such purposes should be carefully and precisely articulated since possible reasons for favoring residents were considered and rejected by the U.S. Supreme Court, in Zobel v. Williams, 457 US , 102 SCt 2309, 72 LEd2d 2309 (1982) (hereinafter Zobel III). The State of Alaska argued that its Permanent Fund distribution scheme, among other things, would provide residents with an incentive to remain in Alaska. The U.S. Supreme Court was not impressed with this reasoning, finding that such an objective was "not rationally related to the distinctions" the State sought to make between long-term residents and new arrivals. It is important to note that the Court rejected the "incentive" argument, even under a rational basis analysis, due to the sliding scale durational residency aspect of the dividend plan (which created too many classes of residents). Such a purpose is likely equally invalid even for pure residency requirements due to the heightened scrutiny suggested by State v. Erickson, supra and State v. Ostrosky, supra.

Another purpose articulated by the State in support of the Permanent Fund distribution plan, that dividends constitute a reward for past residency, was also considered illegitimate by the U.S. Supreme Court. The Court looked to Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 US 618, 632-633, 89 SCt 1322, 22 LEd2d 600 (1969), where it had said:

"Appellants argue further that the challenged classification may be sustained as an attempt to distinguish between new and old residents on the basis of the contributions they have made to the community through the payment of taxes. . Appellant's reasoning would permit the State to apportion all benefits and services according to the past tax [or intangible] contributions of its citizens. The Equal Protection Clause prohibits such an apportionment of State services.'" (original emphasis) Quoted in Zobel III, 102 SCt at 2314.

Again, the U.S. Supreme Court's reasoning in Zobel III is directed at the durational residency requirement. However, it is unlikely such an articulated purpose would have any more validity when used to justify a pure residency requirement.

By far, the most plausible argument supporting residential preference is that the very purpose of the municipal land disposal program is to alleviate substantial overcrowding. It is understood that Larsen Bay's experience, much like that of other rural Alaskan communities, is that large family units are crowded into limited living spaces.¹ This problem would likely be alleviated by transferring municipally-held lands to presently impacted residents. It is probable that Larsen Bay's per capita income is significantly lower than larger urban areas in Southern Alaska. If the City of Larsen Bay were to begin selling its real property at prices low enough to be afforded by its residents, quite understandably more well-to-do Alaskans from other communities could successfully outbid current Larsen Bay residents if the land disposal necessarily is conducted pursuant to the bidding procedures of AS Chapter 29. The only manner in which the municipality might ensure that its residents receive the proffered lands, thus achieving the desired objective of easing overcrowding, would be to favor residents in the bidding procedure.

Another possible purpose for preferring residents in the land disposal program probably would not satisfy Zobel and Gilman. The land disposal program will result in a significant amount of property going from tax-exempt to taxable status, resulting in a substantial increase in the City's property tax base. However beneficial this is to the City, it is not rationally related to a preference for residents. Larsen Bay's property tax base will be affected by the land disposal plan regardless whether the land is transferred to residents or non-residents. In fact, if non-residents are able to bid, they will likely drive up sale prices, inflate land values, and the City's revenues would be higher. Therefore, any arguments along that line likely would be considered insufficient.

3. Testing the "Bona Fides" of Residency.

Of course, requiring that program participants be local residents is but an initial step. It will be necessary to prescribe some sort of standard clarifying what is meant by a "resident." Physical presence in a locale for a described duration, e.g., thirty (30) days, is a common objective indicator of residency. This objective standard is often coupled with a more subjective "domicile" test, i.e., an individual's manifestation of intent to maintain primary abode in a given location. Domicile is apparent from indicia such as primary year-round residence, where licenses are maintained, etc. It is recommended that both durational residence for a reasonable period and domicile be established as "residency" requirements for land disposal program eligibility.

a. Durational Residency. It is not an entirely easy task to determine the extent to which durational residency requirement might be subjected to Eederal and state equal protection analysis by Alaska courts. With regard to the federal clause, the State Supreme Court said in Zobel IIthat it would "no longer regard all durational residency requirements as automatically triggering strict scrutiny." 619 P2d at 448.²

2 Early Alaska cases applied the federal strict scrutiny standard and for the most part struck down durational 2 residency requirements. State v. Van Dort, 502 P2d 453 (Alaska 1972) (75-day residency requirement for voter registration struck down); State v. Wylie, supra (one-year residence requirement for state employment struck down); State v. Adams, supra (one-year residence requirement for initiation of divorce proceedings struck down); Hicklin v. Orbeck, supra (one-year residence for petroleum and pipeline related jobs struck down). In these earlier cases, the Alaska court indicated that infringement on the fundamental right to interstate migration alone compelled application of the strict scrutiny standard. However, these cases did not consider the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling in Memorial Hospital v. Maricopa County, 415 US 250, 94 SCt 1076, 39 LEd2d 306 (1974) that a durational residency requirement will be struck down only if it "penalizes" the right of interstate travel by depriving a recent migrant of a "basic necessity of life" or infringes on a fundamental right other than travel. Thus, interstate migration, standing alone, apparently is not a fundamental right in and of itself.

In Zobel III, the U.S. Supreme Court did not comment on the Alaska court's stance since the Permanent Fund distribution plan failed even the rational basis test.³ It should be noted that prior to Zobel, the Alaska Supreme Court felt that durational residency requirements automatically triggered federal strict scrutiny. Hicklin v. Orbeck, 565 P2d 159 (Alaska 1977). However, in its review of that case, the U.S. Supreme Court limited its analysis to the Privileges and Immunities Clause of Article IV. Hicklin V. Orbeck, 437 US 518, 98 SCt 242, 57 LEd2d 397 (1978).⁴ Given this federal inattention to the Alaska court's thinking as to the applicable analytical standard, it must be asserted that the most recent pronouncement in Zobel II, that strict scrutiny might not ordinarily apply, is correct.

There might be an argument under the federal equal protection clause that a durational residency requirement should be analyzed under strict scrutiny since it conceivably impinges upon the fundamental right of interstate or intrastate

^{3 &}lt;u>Zobel III involved a "sliding scale" durational residency scheme, that being Permanent Fund dividend distribution plan, which would have rewarded State residents with a $50.00 dividend for each of Alaskan residencythis plan was found violative of the equal protection clause since it would have discriminated between at least 20 different classes of residents. The use of such "sliding scale" durational residency was further foreclosed by the Alaska court in Gilman v. Martin, supra.

travel⁵ or impacts a "basic necessity of life."⁶ These factors certainly raise the possibility that a state equal protection claim will be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the "sliding scale" approach of State v. Erickson, supra. Again, Erickson requires an analysis of three factors: (1) the legitimacy of the purposes for the proposed requirement; (2) whether the means chosen to accomplish the objectives actually do so; and (3) the balance between the governmental interest and any individual rights which might be transgressed.

The City might propose several legitimate reasons for favoring longer term residents over new arrivals but should avoid arguments which have failed elsewhere. As stated previously, the U.S. Supreme Court in Zobel III discounted a number of arguments raised by the State in support of its Permanent Fund Distribution Program. These included maintaining a financial incentive for individuals to maintain residence in Alaska and recognition for underined

5 See footnote 1.

6 Although the U.S. Supreme Court noted in Hicklin v. Orbeck, supra, that it had never applied the "basic necessity" factor, at least one federal circuit court has hinted that "cheap alternative housing" or "shelter" might be a "basic necessity of life" which might require strict scrutiny. Hawaii Boating Association v. Water Transportation Facilities Division, 651 F2d 661 (9th Cir. 1981). However, this point was made in a footnote to a decision reviewing the legitimacy of non-residential mooring fees in a small boat harbor. To date, no federal court that I am aware of has expressly ruled that housing or land for housing constitute "basic necessities" triggering strict scrutiny. Such an opportunity was presented in Cole v. Housing Authority of the City of Newport, 435 F2d 807 (1st Cir. 1970), where the First Circuit Court struck down durational residency requirements for public housing eligibility. However, the court did not mention whether public housing constitutes a "basic necessity of life." Instead, it applied strict scrutiny after concluding that the durational residency requirement impermissibly interfered with the fundamental right to travel. This case, preceded Maricopa County and other federal rulings that infringement of the right to travel, by itself, will not trigger strict scrutiny. Thus, the case is weak for applying the federal strict scrutiny standard to any durational residency requirement on the basis that land for housing is a "basic necessity."

-9-

"contributions of various kinds, both tangible and intangible, which residents have made during their years of residency." 102 SCt at 2313. Again, there is probably little merit in postulating the same arguments in favor of the proposed Larsen Bay program.

As Justice Brennan noted in his concurrence in Zobel III, a durational residency requirement is constitutional if "used to test the bona fides of citizenship." Zobel III, supra, 102 SCt at 2318. However, if, the "bona fides" of citizenship constitute the sole purpose for a durational residency requirement, the duration of residence required must be reasonable and bear a substantial relation to the governmental purpose sought to be achieved. Gilman v. Martin, supra, 662 P2d at 127, fn. 7. Thus, in the absence of any other legitimate purpose, the question becomes for how long local residency may be required to ensure an individual's bona fide intent to remain a resident. The six-month residency requirement enacted by the Alaska Legislature for the Permanent Fund distribution plan (in lieu of the sliding scale payment scheme) might be as good a yard stick as any. The six-month rule is likely intended to discourage "outsiders" from flocking to Alaska and too easily obtaining easy money. The State's normal 30-day residency standard obviously would do little to child such opportunism. The same rationale could legitimately support a six-month residence requirement for the Larsen Bay land disposal program. Arguably, more than 30 days is necessary to discourage outsiders from temporarily setting up a tent in Larsen Bay in order to obtain an inexpensive site for a summer home or hunting/fishing. A six-month requirement would tend to discourage those who depend on jobs outside of Larsen At the same time, it would not seem unduly harsh on Bay. individuals who truly desire to live there on a year-round basis. A six-month trial period would seem a most reasonable test of such resolve.

The final step in the Erickson analysis requires that the means chosen to promote the purpose be balanced against affected constitutional rights. While an infringement of the right to travel by itself is not sufficient to trigger federal strict scrutiny, travel is a basic right which calls for enhanced scrunity. State v. Ostrosky, supra. The infringement of this right must be balanced against the means employed to carry out the governmental interest. Given the strong interest in requiring bona fide local residency so that the current victims of overcrowding, current residents, are granted relief, on balance any infringement on the right to intrastate travel is comparatively minimal.

4. Domicile.

Durational residency constitutes an objective showing of intent to live in a particular geographical area. This objective test can be supplemented or supplanted by a more subjective test of domicile.⁷ While it is preferable that the domicile test complement a durational residency requirement, it might be useful by itself should the durational requirement be struck down by a reviewing court.

A recent Alaska Attorney General's opinion offers a good summary of the "domicile" test:

"A common-law distinction between 'domicile' and 'residence' has been incorporated into modern law. The terms are often used interchangeably, though they are not synonymous. Every person has at all times a domicile, but only one, either assigned by law, or if capable under the law, assigned by choice. However, one may have established residency in a number of states. Residency merely indicates a factual place of abode.

There are three types of domicile -- (1) domicile or origin; (2) domicile of choice; and (3) domicile at law. A person's domicile of origin is the domicile of her/his parent, the head of the family, or the person on whom she/he is legally dependent, at the time of the child's birth. It is generally the place of birth. Domicile of choice is the place a person has affirmatively chosen to displace a previous domicile. Domicile by operation of law is a domicile which the law attributes to a person, independent of her/his own intentions, because of a legal domestic relation (i.e., spouse's domicile based on parents).

Appendix 4

⁷ The State presently applies both tests. For instance, AS 14.40.306(4) defines a "resident" for state educational loan purposes, as "a person domiciled in Alaska who has resided in Alaska for at least two years..."

Appendix Four

Proof of domicile by choice and a determination of whether domicile by operation of law is controlling are the two areas that create confusion in determining whether an educational loan applicant is an Alaskan resident.

Domicile by choice requires actual physical presence in the State, although temporary absence does not destroy domicile, coupled with the state of mind of intending to acquire a new permanent abode and abandon the old. Domicile may be termed as a bona fide residency, not merely to live in a place, but to make a home there. In Hicklin v. Orbeck, 565 P2d 159, 171 (Alaska 1977) reversed in part on other grounds 437 US 518, 57 LEd2d 397 (1978), the Alaska Supreme Court explained that '[d]omicile or bona fide residence contains an objective requirement of physical presence and a subjective intent requirement.' See also State v. Adams, 522 P2d 1125, 1131 (Alaska 1974). To determine if the subjective intent element has been met, objective criteria can be utilized, such as whether a person receives any benefits from another state -- voting, car registration; driver's license; employment compensation; public assistance; 'resident' tuition rate for unemancipated children; professional and occupational licenses -- as well as considering the state where one resides 'year-round', owns property, and files tax returns. No one criteria is controlling.

Mere length of residency in a locality does not convert physical presence into domicile without the intent to permanently remain." (Footnotes omitted, original emphasis) August 28, 1979 Op. Atty. Gen., pp. 2-4.

Obviously Larsen Bay's land disposal ordinance should include in any residency requirement a domicile standard which incorporates the common-law factors discussed above.

	Dept. of Community and Regional Affairs	FILE NO:	366-178-84

ROM:	Attorney General	SUBJECT:	Re: Municipal land
By:	Douglas K. Mertz Man Assistant Attorney General Department of Law		conveyances to tra- ditional or IRA Councils

Your predecessor asked our opinion on the question of whether a traditional village council or a council organized under the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934 is eligible to receive land from municipalities under AS 29.48.260(b). That subsection permits general law municipalities to "sell, lease, donate or exchange" real property with "the United States, the state or a political subdivision" without the necessity of prior notice and public bidding contained in AS 29.48.260(c). We understand that several municipalities have inquired whether local native councils may be considered "political subdivisions" so that public land may be conveyed to them without the necessity of public bidding. $\underline{1}/$

1/ This office recently issued a memorandum of advice on municipal land disposals in general to your department (1983 Inf. Op. Att'y Gen. (Nov. 21; 366-522-83)) by Assistant Attorney General Kathryn Kolkhorst, and we have previously issued memoranda covering authority of municipalities to dispose of lands without competitive bidding to individuals or to the federal government for IRA councils. This office is also preparing a memorandum on whether traditional councils have capacity to hold title to land. See 1981 Inf. Op. Att'y Gen. (May 6; J66-725-81) and 1981 Inf. Op. Att'y Gen. (May 28; J66-725-81), both by Assistant Attorney General G. Thomas Koester.

Honorable Emil Notti Commissioner Dept. of Community and Regional Affairs 366-178-84

After carefully examining the language of AS 29.48.-260(b), 2/ we conclude that traditional and IRA councils are not "political subdivisions" for purposes of that statute. There may be other mechanisms, however, which, in limited cases, can enable general law municipalities to make the same type of transfer. 3/

First, it is clear that native councils are not subdivisions of either the state or the federal government. They are not agencies of those governments, but instead are organized independently and do not exist to serve as an arm of either the state or federal government. 4/ These councils may receive substantial funding from the United States, and limited assistance from the State of Alaska, but that fact alone does not make an entity a "political subdivision" of a larger government. We have already opined that the Village Council of Minto, for example, is not a political subdivision of the state in the narrow sense of being a unit of local government authorized by the Alaska Constitution (see 1981 Inf. Op. Att'y Gen. (July 24; J66-747-81, by Assistant Attorney General Laura L. Davis)). At the same time, the

2/ AS 29.48.260(b) states:

Notwithstanding the provisions of (c) of this section, a municipality may sell, lease, donate or exchange with the United States, the state, or a political subdivision real estate or other property, or interest in property, when in the judgment of the assembly or council it is advantageous to the municipality to do so.

3/ AS 29.48 applies only to general law municipalities. The Timitations contained therein do not apply to home rule local governments. Lien v. City of Ketchikan, 383 P.2d 729 (Alaska 1963). We also note that Senate Bill No. 1, which is now pending in the Alaska Legislature, would eliminate the restrictions in AS 29.48.260. This memorandum addresses only the restrictions in the current law.

4/ It is true that some native councils, those organized pursuant to the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934, 25 U.S.C. $ 476 et seq., must have their constitutions approved by the U.S. Secretary of the Interior and are subject to oversight by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. We believe no IRA council would dispute, however, that it exists to serve its own membership, not to serve as an arm of the federal government. Honorable Emil Notti Commissioner Dept. of Community and Regional Affairs 366-178-84 May 1, 1984 Page 3

However, there remains the possibility that, under subsection (d) of AS 29.48.260, a municipality could dispose of certain lands to a native council without going through the public bidding requirements of subsection (c). Subsection (d) permits a municipality to establish by ordinance a formal procedure for disposal of municipal land acquired from the state, in which case the provisions of subsection (c) do not apply. Thus, it appears that a municipality which enacted ordinances setting up a formal procedure for land disposals could incorporate in those procedures provisions allowing alienation of land to a native council without the requirement of the public bidding process as long as the land was originally acquired from the state.

This authority is not completely unrestricted. No municipality may expend public resources, including land, except 5/ One other interpretation of AS 29.48.260(b) must be dealt with, namely, the possibility that the phrase "political subdivision" in that subsection refers, not to subdivisions of the United States and the State, but to some sort of broader political "division", i.e., to separate and independent political areas. It is true that the phrase has been used in that sense to refer to tribal governments on reservations, where state and federal jurisdiction is curtailed by law (see Goddard v. Babbitt, 536 F. Supp. 538, 540 (D. Ariz. 1982)). Although it is possible that this argument could be made in reference to the Metlakatla Indian Community, which is Alaska's only reservation government, we do not believe the courts would extend this interpretation to cover nonreservation native councils. IRA and traditional councils in Alaska perform a variety of functions, but few even approach the model of a general local government representing the public at large in a specific area. This is particularly true in communities where AS 29.48.260 would come into play, i.e., communities which have a municipal government created under state law. Of course, this conclusion could change if the courts ever gave a more expansive interpretation to native council powers, but with the present state of the law we believe that such councils would not be considered political subdivisions.

for a public purpose. See Lien v. City of Ketchikan, 383 P.2d 721 (Alaska 1963). Under state law no municipality may engage in racially discriminatory actions, or deny equal protection to all citizens. The sum total of these constitutional requirements is that, in any disposal ordinance enacted under subsection (d) of AS 29.48.260, there must be provisions to ensure that disposals serve a public purpose, do not discriminate on a racial basis, and do not deny equal protection. To put these requirements in more concrete terms, any disposal of municipal lands to a native council under subsection (d), without an equal opportunity for all interested parties to compete for the land, should require that the native council use the land only for public purposes and without discrimination on racial grounds. Thus for example, a transfer of municipal land to an IRA organization for the purpose of building a community center should include a restriction that the facility be open to the public on an equal basis without regard to race. The disposal ordinance would also have to ensure that all similarly situated groups have the same opportunity to be the beneficiaries of such disposals, i.e., that the municipality is not unfairly restricting disposals to one limited membership group. With these restrictions in mind, it would then be permissible for municipalities to dispose of lands directly to native councils.

Let us know if you need further advice.

November 21, 1983

By: Kathryn Kolkhorst Assistant Attorney General Oil and Gas Section - Juneau

This opinion will address the several questions your predecessor asked about AS 29.48.260(a) -- 29.48.260(f) in order to assist you in developing draft land disposal ordinances. Each question you have posed is answered for general law municipalities, as the statute does not apply to home rule municipalities. Questions 6, 7, and 8 are answered for home rule municipalities and general law municipalities exempt from AS 29.48.260(c). General comments concerning the potential effect of SB 1 are also included.

GENERAL COMMENTS

Home rule municipalities possess "all legislative pow-ers not prohibited by law or by charter." Alaska Const. art. X, § 11; AS 29.08.010. Only certain specific provisions in Title 29 apply to limit the powers of home rule municipalities, 1/ and the land disposal statute is not one of these limitations. Therefore, the statute does not apply to home rule municipali-ties. See Lien v. City of Ketchikan, 383 P.2d 721, 723 (Alaska

1/ AS 29.13.100 provides:

Limitation of home rule powers. Only the following provisions of this title apply to home rule municipalities as prohibitions on acting otherwise than as provided. They supersede existing and prohibit future home rule enactments which provide otherwise:

The list which follows does not include AS 29.48.260.

1963) (AS 29.10.132(a), the predecessor of AS 29.48.260(a), is not applicable to a home rule city) to acquire, manage, control, use and dispose of real and personal property for a purpose authorized under AS 29.03.010 -- 29.95.030, federal law, or other law, or in accordance with such law, ...

The provisions in AS 29.48.260 thus apply only to general law municipalities.

General law municipalities have various general powers, one of which is:

AS 29.48.010(9).

For general law municipalities, AS 29.48.260(a) authorizes disposal of municipal property "no longer required for municipal purposes."

A liberal construction is given, in AS 29.48.310, to "all powers and functions" of boroughs and cities conferred by Title 29. In addition,

> Extent of powers. Unless otherwise limited by law, boroughs and cities have and may exercise all powers and functions necessarily or fairly implied in or incident to the object or purpose of all powers and functions conferred in this title.

The following is the full text of AS 29.48.260:

Municipal properties. (a) A municipality may acquire and hold real and personal property or interest in property, and may sell, lease or otherwise dispose of property no longer required for municipal purposes.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of (c) of this section, a municipality may sell, lease, donate or exchange with the United States, the state, or a political subdivision real estate or > other property, or interest in property, when in the judgment of the assembly or council it is advantageous to the municipality to do so.

(c) The assembly or council shall by ordinance establish a formal procedure for the sale, lease or disposition or real property or interest in real property. The ordinance shall require (1) an estimated value of the property by a qualified appraiser or the assessor; (2) a notice of sale published in a newspaper of general circulation distributed within the municipality at least 30 days before the date of the sale, lease, or disposition, or posted within that time in at least three public places in the municipality; (3) pub-lic auction or opening of sealed bids, if any; and (4) other terms and conditions fixed by the assem-However, no ordinance for the bly or council. sale, lease, or disposition of real property or interest in real property valued at $25,000 or more is valid unless ratified by a majority of the qualified voters voting at a regular or special election at which the question of the ratification of the ordinance is submitted. Thirty days notice shall be given of the election and during that period the assembly or council shall have publish-ed at least once a week in a newspaper of general circulation distributed within the municipality a notice stating the time of the election and the place of voting, describing the property to be sold, leased or disposed of, giving a brief state-ment of the terms and conditions of the sale and the consideration, if any, and stating the title and date of passage of the ordinance. Notice shall also be given by posting a copy of it in at least three public places in the municipality at least 30 days before the election. If no newspaper of general circulation is distributed within the municipality, the notice given by posting is sufficient for the purposes of this section.

(d) The assembly or council may by ordinance establish a formal procedure for acquisition from the state of land or rights in land and the disposal of the land or rights in land, in which event the provisions of (c) of this section do not apply.

(e) A municipality, in order to make sites available for beneficial new industries, may acquire and hold real property, either inside or outside the corporate limits, and may sell, lease or dispose of it to persons who agree to operate a beneficial new industry upon the terms and conditions the assembly or council considers advantageous to the municipality.

(f) A deed, contract of sale, lease, or other instrument evidencing disposition by a borough of land or interest in land classified by the borough as agricultural land shall include, among other terms, conditions and limitations which may be required by law or which the assembly may elect to include, a condition that the land is restricted to agricultural use. The assembly may not by subsequent action waive or abrogate the condition for a period of 50 years. An abrogation of the restriction to agricultural use after the 50-year period requires the consent of any party having an interest in the land. The assembly shall provide for enforcement by appropriate legal means, including but not limited to forfeiture of the purchaser's interest for violation of the condition.

CASE LAW ON AS 29.48.260

Two Alaska Supreme Court cases have interpreted the statute. In Kodiak Island Borough v. Large, 622 P.2d 440 (Alaska 1981), the Alaska Supreme Court decided that subsection (d) of AS 29.48.260 (concerning land acquired from the state) dispenses with the requirements of competitive bidding set out in subsection (c). Id. at 445. That case concerned a municipality's sale to a private citizen of land transferred from the state. The sale was negotiated rather than competitively bid. The court did not address the requirement of subsection (c) that the municipality obtain voter approval for parcels valued over $25,000 because the land in question was valued at less than that amount. Id. at 442.

This case clearly holds that a general law municipality disposing of land from the state need not comply with the competitive bidding requirements of subsection (c).

A year before Kodiak Island Borough, the supreme court issued a divided opinion also interpreting AS 29.48.260. Libby v. City of Dillingham, 612 P.2d 33 (Alaska 1980), involved a challenge to Dillingham's negotiated lease of a cold storage facility. Dillingham is a general law municipality. The superior court had held that the business was a "beneficial new industry" within the meaning of subsection (e) of the statute and that such a business was exempt from the competitive bid requirement of subsection (c).

The supreme court majority agreed that the business was a "beneficial new industry" for purposes of subsection (c) but held that the competitive bid requirements of subsection (c) were applicable. Id. at 39. Because two of the other subsections of the statute -- (b) and (d) -- contained explicit exemptions from the requirement of subsection (c), the court reasoned the legislature intended only those subsections to be exempted. "Where the legislature inserted an explicit exemption in some subsections and not in others, it would be inappropriate for us to find an 'implied exemption' in a subsection where the legislature obviously chose not to insert an exemption." Id. at 41.

The precedential value of this conclusion is very weak, however, because Justices Rabinowitz and Boochever both believed that the legislature did not intend "beneficial new industries" to be subject to either competitive bid or voter ratification. In concurring opinions, these two justices looked to the statutory antecedent to AS 29.48.260(e), the public policies underlying the earlier statutes, and general principles of statutory interpretation. $\underline{2}/$

^{2/} Although disagreeing with the majority on the question whether subsection (c) applied to "beneficial new industries," both Rabinowitz and Boochever concurred in the remand because neither believed the business in question to be a "beneficial new industry." Therefore, they believed the particular business was subject to the bid and ratification requirements of subsection (c). Justice Matthews expressed no opinion on the question of whether subsection (c) applied to "beneficial new industries" because he did not believe that the issue was properly before the court.

The following are answers to your specific questions.

 Does the statute limit the land disposal method to public auction and sealed bids? Or, can a municipality dispose of interest in land by other methods such as a lottery, point system, or staking?

The statute on its face limits the land disposal system to a competitive bid which requires appraisal, 30 days notice of the sale, and "public auction or opening of sealed bids, if any." AS 29.48.260(c). It is a general principle of statutory construction that if a legislature enumerates only a few procedures, it must have intended to exclude any others it did not name. 3/ According to this principle, the fact that the legislature listed only auction and sealed bids meant the legislature intended to exclude any other form of disposal.

Nevertheless, a look at the history of this bill is necessary in order to determine whether the legislature actually debated the issue.

The statute governing municipal land disposal from 1949 until the new municipal code legislation went into effect in 1972 was AS 29.10.132. It is set out in its entirety in note 4. $\frac{4}{4}$

3/ The principle is called expressio unius est exclusio alterius. 2A C. Sands, Sutherland Statutory Construction § 47.23.

4/ AS 29.10.132 provides:

City properties. (a) The council may acquire by purchase or otherwise and hold real estate and other property, or any interest in property, and may sell, lease or dispose of the real estate and other property, or interest in property, including property acquired or held for or devoted to a public use, when in the judgment of the city council it is no longer required for municipal purposes.

(b) The council may sell, lease or donate or exchange with the United States, the state, or any political subdivision real estate or other property, or interest in property, whenever in the judgment of the city council it is advantageous to the city to do so.

(c) In the sale, lease or disposition of real property or interest in real property valued at more than $5,000, the city council shall by ordinance fix and prescribe the terms of the sale, lease or disposition, and the consideration for it when fixed by the city by ordinance shall be considered adequate and final. However, no ordinance for the sale, lease, or disposition of real property or interest in real property valued at more than $5,000 is valid unless ratified by a majority of the qualified voters voting at a general or special election at which the question of the ratification of the ordinance is submitted. Thirty days, notice shall be given of the election and during that period the city council shall have published at least once each week in a newspaper published in the city a notice stating the time of the election and the place of voting, describing the property to be sold, leased, or disposed of, giving a brief statement of the terms and conditions of the sale and the consideration, if any, and stating the title and date of passage of the ordinance. If no newspaper is published in the city, the notice shall be given by posting a copy of it in at least six public places in the city at least thirty days before the election.

(d) The council may by ordinance sell, lease or donate to or exchange with any local independent school district, any real estate or other property, or interest in property used exclusively for school purposes, whenever in the judgment of the city council it appears advantageous to the city to do so, ratification of large parcels. However, competitive bid was not required; the city was permitted to set the price.

Revision of the municipal laws was directed by the Third Legislature, First Session, and in 1963 and 1964 the Local Affairs Agency of the Office of the Governor 5/, Department of Law, and the Legislative Council prepared the first draft of the new legislation. The revision was introduced as SB 101 in 1965, and reintroduced in 1966, 1967 and 1969 after several hearings and the deliberations of many committees. Although the first version of SB 101 did not include any requirement for competitive bid, CSSB 101 in 1965 required a competitive bid procedure which included "(3) public opening of sealed bids, if any." That same language is contained in HB 508, considered in 1966, and HB 185 in 1967. By 1971, after review of the 100-page bill by the Alaska Municipal League, the language had been changed to "(3) public auction or opening of sealed bids, if any." This language was included in SB 113, which was introduced in 1971 by the Local Government Committee and was included in the final version of the bill that passed in 1972. I could find no documentation in the

> and the sale, lease, donation or exchange is not subject to the provisions of this section requiring ratification by the voters.

(e) The council, in order to make sites available for new industries which will benefit the municipality, may likewise acquire, own and hold such sites, including real property, either inside or outside the corporate limits and may sell, lease or dispose of them upon the terms and conditions as it considers advantageous to the civic welfare of the city, to persons who will agree to install, maintain and operate a beneficial new industry. Sites acquired under this paragraph and any right, equity, claim or title acquired by the municipality to real property sold to it for delinquent taxes are not "property acquired, owned or held for or devoted to a public use" as used herein.

legislative files that this particular section of AS 29.48.260(c) was discussed.

The "plain meaning" of the statute permits only auction and sealed bid. In the absence of any legislative history indicating that other methods were intended to be included, the municipality must be limited to those two specified disposal methods. A sealed lottery application could be considered a sealed bid; however, the "bidder" could only be awarded the right to purchase the land at assessed value.

 Does Section (d) which pertains to land conveyed to the municipality by the State allow municipalities the right to chose any method of disposal they wish and also not be bound by election requirements if the value of the property is over $25,000?

Subsection (d) explicitly exempts land disposals from the competitive bid and voter ratification procedures of subsection (c) where the land or right in land were obtained from the state, and where the assembly or council has by ordinance established a formal procedure for acquisition and disposal of state land. Thus, the answer to your question is that the municipality may choose any method of disposal not prohibited elsewhere in Title 29 or in the federal and state constitutions. Under subsection (d), the value of the land is immaterial. See discussion earlier in this memo of Kodiak Island Borough v. Large.

 Section (c) (4) requires voter approval of a land sale if the value is $25,000 or greater. Does this requirement apply to the value of individual parcels or does it apply to the total value of all properties being sold?

The purpose of the requirement in subsection (c) appears to be to exempt small or less valuable parcels from the voter ratification requirement. It is not clear from the statute what standards the municipal officials should use in determining whether to aggregate small parcels in an ordinance (which would require a public vote) or put each parcel in a separate ordinance (passage of which would not require a public vote). The $25,000 limit must be applied to the behavior of the municipal officials in a reasonable and not arbitrary manner. If a general law municipality sells several noncontiguous parcels, each assessed at less than $25,000, the purpose of the statute would not be violated. However, a subdivision of a parcel into several plots, each valued at under $25,000, could violate the statute if the total of all of the plots substantially exceeded the limit and the purpose of the subdivision was to avoid the voter ratification requirement.

4. Must a municipality lease land on a competitive basis or can they negotiate? If they must go competitive, can they use the same disposal methods as a sale of municipal property?

Under AS 29.48.260, a municipality may lease land to individuals in the same manner as it may sell the land. In other words, competitive bids are required, and if the lease is valued at $25,000 or more, voter ratification is necessary for the ordinance authorizing the lease. The exemptions provided by the statute for leases for the general law municipality are, again, the same as for sale, namely: 1) if the lease concerns land that was obtained from the state, neither competitive bid nor voter ratification is required, no matter what the value of the lease; and 2) if the lessee is a "beneficial new industry" it may be exempt from the competitive bid and ratification requirement. 6/

As for your question on other disposal methods by competitive lease, our answer would be the same as our answer pertaining to sales in question no. 1 of this memorandum.

Can a municipality exchange land with a private individual or corporation? If so, under what circumstances and conditions?

Where the municipality must comply with the competitive bid and voter ratification requirements of subsection (c) of course, no exchange would be permitted. If the land in question ^{6/} As previously noted, the holding in Libby v. City of Dillingham, 612 P.2d 33 (Alaska 1980), that a "beneficial new industry" is not exempt from subsection (c) is a weak one. Of the two-vote majority subscribing to this view, only Justice Burke remains on the court. One of the justices who believed that the legislature did intend to make the exemption, Justice Rabinowitz, remains on the bench. Also remaining is Justice Matthews, who declined to reach the issue.

were obtained from the state under subsection (d), exchanges would be permitted for land "no longer required for municipal purposes." AS 29.48.260(a).

Because the municipality holds land as a public trust, the terms and conditions of the exchange must generally be fair and reasonable. C. Rhyne, Municipal Law 375-376 (1957). In any situation which avoids competitive bid, care should be taken to "guard against favoritism, improvidence, extravagance, fraud and corruption." 10 E. McQuillin, The Law of Municipal Corporations § 29.29 at 321 (rev. 3rd ed. 1966).

As the answers to your questions no. 6, 7 and 8 pertain to land disposal situations incompatible with competitive bidding, it should be understood that the answers to these questions apply to home rule municipalities, and to general law municipalities distributing land under provisions exempt from AS 29.48.-260(c). I have answered your question no. 7 before the other two.

Once a property to be sold is assessed or appraised, can the municipality offer the property at less than this value or provide a discount?

It is fundamental that no public property in the state be transferred except "for a public purpose." Alaska Const. art. IX, § 6. 7/ Whether a public purpose is being served must be decided as each case arises and in the light of the particular facts and circumstances of each case. DeArmand v. Alaska State Dev. Corp., 376 P.2d 717, 721 (Alaska 1962).

The question whether a municipality may dispose of land for less than fair market value is a difficult one. On the one hand, the municipality has a duty to exercise all of its powers for a public use or purpose. 2 E. McQuillin, The Law of Municipal Corporations § 10.31 at 818. All its powers, property and offices constitute a public trust to be administered by its officers. Id. at 819. If a municipality cannot give away its property except for a public purpose, it should not be able to dispose of property without consideration, unless there is a public purpose for the gift. Id. § 28.43 at 127. 8/ As noted in McQuillin, Statutes governing the sale of public property are designed to secure the most beneficial terms for the public body, and the basic philosophy underlying these statutes is that economy must be recovered, extravagance avoided, and opportunities for fraud or favoritism suppressed.

Id. § 28.44 at 130.

On the other hand, a municipality has broad discretion in managing its property, both because of the liberally construed grant of powers necessary to provide for its citizens 9/ and because of a modern trend extending the scope of permissible public purposes afforded municipal activities. Id. § 10.31 at 819. Absent evidence of "fraud, corruption or arbitrary unreasonable actions amounting to abuse of discretion," discretionary functions of municipalities such as this will generally not be reviewed by courts, according to McQuillin. Id. § 10.33 at 825. Accord, C. Rhyne, Municipal Law 380-381. It is clearly possible to have a justifiable public purpose for offering land at a discount to citizens, and it is our opinion that a municipality may offer such discount subject to certain limitation. First, the discount must not be so substantial that it amounts to a failure of consideration, i.e., an outright gift. See cases cited in note 7. Second, in determining those citizens eligible for a discount, the municipalities may not discriminate in a manner which violates the constitutional grant of equal protection under the law.

Is it permissible to require that an individual demonstrate a specified degree of improvement on a property

9/ See AS 29.48.310 and AS 29.48.320.

^{8/} In general a municipality may not make a gift of land to a private organization. Gritton v. Des Moines, 73 N.W.2d 813, 820 (Iowa 1955); United Community Services v. Omaha Nat. Bank, 77 N.W.2d 576, 582-583 (Neb. 1956); Borough of Rockaway v. Rockden American Legion, Post No. 175, 189 A.2d 212, 212-213 (N.J. 1963).

and/or a certain length of residency before a municipality issues title to the property or allows a discount on the purchase price? $[\underline{10}/]$

A municipality may withhold title to property until the purchaser meets certain conditions. A specified degree of improvement such as the construction of a house or a certain length of residency after the "purchase" are conditions which are supported by permissible purposes, such as encouraging community growth and population stability. Please see answer no. 8 for analysis of permissible purposes. A municipality may also provide a discount once a condition is fulfilled, subject to the restrictions listed in answer no. 7 of this memorandum, that the discount not be so substantial as to make the land an outright gift.

8. In what manner and under what conditions can a municipality offer preference rights for the purchase or lease of municipal property? Specifically, can they require: that a person be a resident without specifying a length of residency?; that a person be an occupant of the property prior to the disposal?; that a person have personal property on the premises for given period of time prior to disposal?; a valid, preexisting lease?; a veteran's status?; or have an income below a certain level?

A municipality discriminating among potential purchasers of its land must not deny to any person "the equal protection of the laws." U.S. Const. amend. XIV, § 1. In the constitution, "all persons are equal and entitled to equal rights, opportunities, and protection under the law." Alaska Const. art. I, § 11.

In order to fulfill this requirement of equal protection, the municipality must first make no classification based on race, national origin, or sex.

^{10/} Sandra Cook, then of the Division of Community Planning, informed me on August 8, 1983 that this question was intended to cover future conditions, i.e., conditions to apply after the sale.

Second, any classification made by the municipality to favor one group over the other must have a fair and substantial relation to a legitimate governmental objective. State v. Ostro- sky, 667 P.2d 1184 (Alaska 1983); State v. Erickson, 574 P.2d 1 (Alaska 1978); Isakson v. Rickey, 550 P.2d 359 (Alaska 1976).

The analysis of the six conditions you have listed, and any others you might think of in the future, should therefore proceed as follows:

1. Does the condition have a legitimate purpose? Or, does the government have a good reason for making the classification?

2. Does the classification include most or all people and only those people who should be included in order to satisfy the intended purpose?

Both questions must be affirmatively answered in order for any of the conditions to be upheld.

Low income and veteran's status.

Such conditions as low income and veteran's status are intended to benefit easily identifiable groups, and it is permissible for a municipality to favor them. The conditions, of course, must clearly define includable income.

b) Residency.

Requiring a prospective purchaser to be a resident has the permissible purposes of encouraging the municipality's residents to be landowners and promoting population stability. An extended durational component to a residency status is not permitted, as the supreme court held in Gilman v. Martin, 662 P.2d 120 (Alaska 1983). 11/

11/ The court held:

We note that if a residency requirement is constitutional, "length of residency may ... be used to test the bona fides of citizenship." Zobel III, 457 U.S. at 70, 102 S.Ct. at 2318, 72 L.Ed.2d at 684 (Brennan, J., concurring). The duration of residence requir-

November 21, 1983 Page 15

Gilman concerned a land sale lottery ordinance enacted by the Kenai Peninsula Borough for disposal of land conveyed from the state. 12/ The ordinance authorized sale of borough land at fair market value to persons who filed applications and had been residents of the borough for at least a year. The court held that a durational residency requirement was unconstitutional, but that a simple nondurational residency requirement would have been acceptable if it were reasonable and had a "fair and substantial relation" to the purpose of the ordinance. Id. at 125-127. If the ordinance had simply stated that its purpose was to benefit its residents, the court implied strongly that such an ordinance would have met constitutional objectives. 13/

The court also held that a percentage reduction in the sale price of a parcel for each year of residency was unconstitutional under both the United States and Alaska equal protection clauses. Id. at 129.

The disposal of the land by lottery was permissible, the court ruled, because AS 29.48.260(d) did not limit the method ed, however, must be reasonable and bear a substantial relation to the governmental purpose sought to be achieved. Isakson v. Rickey, 550 P.2d 359, 362 (Alaska 1976).

Id. at 127.

12/ Kenai Peninsula Borough is a general law municipality. Because the land had been obtained from the state, AS 29.48.260(c) did not apply.

13/ However, the state purpose of the ordinance had been to sell parcels to "adjoining owners." Since many of these owners of property adjacent to that being sold were nonresidents of the borough and thus ineligible to participate in the lottery, the court found that the ordinance did not have "fair and substantial return" to its stated purpose. The court in note 6 stated: "We do not hold that residency requirements are per se invalid. At least, however, when a purpose is stated for the requirement, the purpose must be a valid one that is substantially furthered by the classification." Gilman, 662 P.2d at 126, n.6.

of disposal, and AS 29.48.310 directs that a "liberal construction shall be given to all powers and function of boroughs and cities conferred in this title." $\underline{14}/$

c) Occupancy of the particular land.

The conditions tied to occupancy on a particular plot of land, having property on the land, or having a pre-existing lease are slightly more problematic. What is the purpose of singling out those persons who have made a commitment to land before it was available for sale? There could be a possibility that persons with "inside" knowledge of a municipal council's plans could gain an unfair advantage.

In our telephone conversations, Sandra Cook and I talked about distributing land by a point system which would favor purchasers with higher scores in categories such as have been listed above. 15/ Of course, for any point system classification to be constitutional, each element in it which awarded points would have to be constitutional.

EFFECTS OF SB 1

SB 1 repeals the existing Title 29 and substitutes the following provision which would control land disposal:

Municipal property. The governing body shall by ordinance establish a formal procedure for acquisition and disposal of land and interest in land by the municipality.

This provision, if passed, would be AS 29.35.090. I understand that this provision is the same as it was when the bill was first 14/ See also Alaska Const. art. X, § 1. The majority also held that the lottery was not prohibited by state gambling statutes.

15/ The only other possible classification we discussed that was not listed in your memorandum was that of head-of-household. A municipality may permissibly reward those of its land purchasers who have dependents.

introduced four years ago. Tamara Cook of the Legislative Affairs Agency, who is familiar with the bill, tells me that this is the only restriction on land disposal in SB 1.

The passage of the bill in its present form would have no effect on home rule municipalities since they already can exercise all powers not prohibited; but it would remove all the restrictions AS 29.48.260 presently places on general law municipalities. Thus, under this new bill both kinds of municipalities could dispose of land by any of the various methods such as auction, lottery, or point system. They would still be required to dispose of the land in a manner that did not violate the state or federal constitutions, as explained earlier in this memorandum.

Re: Municipal conveyances to regional housing authorities. Our file J-66-725-81.

Dear Mr. Walleri:

You requested that I review my conclusion, set out in my May 6, 1981 letter to Regional Solicitor John M. Allen, that under Alaska law it is permissible for a municipality to convey land to a Regional Housing Authority established under AS 18.55.996 without following the competitive bidding procedures set out in AS 29.48.260(c). Specifically, you requested that I review that conclusion in light of the Alaska Supreme Court's decision in Libby v. City of Dillingham, 612 P.2d 33 (Alaska 1980).

In Libby, the Alaska Supreme Court held that the authority in AS 29.48.260(e) for a municipality to dispose of land "upon the terms and conditions the assembly or council considers advantageous to the municipality" to make sites available for beneficial new industries does not include the authority to dispense with competitive bidding. A majority of the Court concluded that AS 29.48.260(e) should not be read as creating an implied exception to the competitive bidding requirement of AS 29.48.260(c) where AS 29.48.260(b) and (d) establish express exceptions to the competitive bidding requirements. Justice Rabinowitz, concurring in the result, reached the opposite conclusion. He also noted that fact specific exceptions to competitive bidding requirements have been recognized by the courts, including at least one instance in which a court recognized such an exception for low-rent housing for the elderly. Libby, supra at 45, n. 11 (Rabinowitz, J., concurring), citing Lehigh Constr. Co. v. Housing Auth. of City of Orange, 56 N.J. 447, 267 A.2d 41 (1970).

However, an implied exception to the competitive bidding requirement of AS 29.48.260(c) need not be found for a municipality to convey land to a Regional Housing Authority without competitive bidding. AS 29.48.260(b) contains an explicit exception to the competitive bidding requirement. That subsection provides:

> Notwithstanding the provisions of (c) of this section, a municipality may sell, lease, donate or exchange with the United States, the state, or a political subdivision real estate or other property, or interest in property, when in the judgment of the assembly or council it is advantageous to the municipality to do so.

Although a Regional Housing Authority is not per se "the state, or a political subdivision" as set out in AS 29.-48.260(b), it is "a public body corporate and politic . . . possessing all powers, rights and functions now or subsequently specified for the Alaska State Housing Authority." AS 18.55.996(b) (in part). The Alaska State Housing Authority (ASHA) has been held to be an instrumentality of the state. Alaska State Housing Authority v. Dixon, 496 P.2d 649 (Alaska 1972). While there are significant statutory differences between the corporate makeup of ASHA and Regional Housing Authorities, Regional Housing Authorities are created pursuant to legislative authorization and perform a public service much the same as ASHA. For that purpose, they would appear to occupy the same position as ASHA, that is an instrumentality of the state for purposes of the exception to the competitive bidding requirement contained in AS 29.48.260(b).

This conclusion is reenforced by reference to AS 18.55.280, which enables a municipality to donate property to ASHA without appraisal, public notice or advertisement or competitive bidding. Since Regional Housing Authorities possess "all powers, rights and functions now or subsequently specified for the Alaska State Housing Authority," they would seem to possess the same right to receive such a donation.

AS 18.55.996 (b) also provides (in part):

The authority shall have the power to enter into agreements with local government, other political subdivisions of the state, the state or the federal government for the exercise of a function or power relating to construction, operation and maintenance of public facilities or public utilities. Upon execution of such an agreement and for the period of the agreement the authority shall have the same powers and functions relating to the subject matter of the agreement as those which may legally be exercised by the governmental unit . . .

Michael J. Walleri Re: J-66-725-81 May 28, 1981 Page 3

Under AS 29.48.030(a)(20), municipalities may exercise the powers necessary to provide "housing and urban renewal, rehabilitation and development" as public facilities and services. Construing AS 18.55.996(b) and AS 29.48.030(a)(20) together and harmonizing them, it appears that a municipality could contract with a Regional Housing Authority to perform the public services of housing and urban renewal, rehabilitation and development. Under such an agreement, it would elevate form over substance to require the municipality to lease land to the Regional Housing Authority pursuant to competitive bidding. This is particularly true since, unlike Libby, the Regional Housing Authority may be a single source public provider of the services, not one of many interested private sources for which the municipality may be holding land (in effect) for a private purpose.

Summarizing, it remains our opinion that municipalities may make donations of municipally-owned lands directly to a Regional Housing Authority without competitive bidding pursuant to AS 29.48.260(b), and that the Alaska Supreme Court's decision in Libby does not change this result.

We hope you find this elaboration of our earlier statement helpful. If you have further questions, please contact me at your convenience.

Sincerely,

WILSON L. CONDON ATTORNEY GENERAL

> Re: Regional Solicitor's April 23, 1981 memorandum regarding "Conveyance of municipally-owned lots in townsites to individuals." Our file J-66-725-81

Dear Mr. Allen:

Assistant Attorney General Thomas E. Meacham of the Anchorage Office of the Alaska Department of Law provided me with a copy of your above-captioned Memorandum. After review of that Memorandum and discussion with Mr. Meacham and others, we believe that some comment from the State of Alaska's perspective is necessary.

The situation appears to be as follows:

Many predominately Native municipalities are reluctant to dispose of their lands by public auction. . . In addition, Natives who relied upon the Saxman Opinion (66 I.D. 212) already occupy some municipally-owned lands. Some municipalities are therefore interested in exploring methods by which local residents could gain title to the municipallyowned land without a public auction. Tanana Chiefs' Conference has suggested that the United States accept the unoccupied lands from the municipalities pursuant to 25 U.S.C. § 451 and redispose of them in fee to the local IRA Council which, in turn, would convey them to individual tribal members.

John M. Allen, Esq. Re: J-66-725-81

Memorandum, pp. 1-2.

The problem appears to be that AS 29.48.260 restricts the authority of municipalities to dispose of municipal property. As a general rule, as you note in your Memorandum, p. 1, municially-owned lands may be disposed of only in accordance with a disposal ordinance requiring an appraisal, public notice, and a public auction. AS 29.48.260(c). However, as you also note, Memorandum, p. 2, AS 29.48.260(b) authorizes a municipality to "sell, lease, donate or exchange" municipally-owned lands with the United States. In the event of such a sale, lease, donation or exchange, your conclusion was that "there is statutory authority for the United States to accept the lands from the municipality and redispose of them for use in any program authorized by the provisions of law for the benefit of Indians." Memorandum, p. 2 (emphasis added).

Our major concern with your conclusion is that the contemplated conveyance would result in the dedication of municipally-owned lands for the benefit of a raciallydefined class. This would be a direct violation of the equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution and Article I, Section 1 of the Alaska Constitution. While these provisions are not applicable to the United States, they do apply to both the State of Alaska and municipalities organized under Alaska law.

That result stems directly from 25 U.S.C. § 451, the statute you cite as authority for the Secretary to accept a conveyance from municipalities. That statute gives the Secretary of the Interior authority to accept donations of funds or other property "for the advancement of the Indian race." (Emphasis added.) Accordingly, a conveyance to the United States under AS 29.48.260(b) accepted by the Secretary under 25 U.S.C. § 451 would be ultra vires since it would be exclusively for the "Indian race" on behalf of which the Secretary would accept the property. Such dedication of public property would not serve a "public purpose," only a racially-restricted one.

You also state:

Although Alaska State law does not permit a direct donation of municipally-owned lots from the municipality to the Indian Housing Authority, I do not believe that 25 U.S.C. § 451 represents an evasion or undermining of State law. AS 29.48.260(b) specifically allows the donation of land to the United States when in the judgment of the municipal council or assembly, it is advantageous to do so. It is certainly not arbitrary for the municipality to determine that donation of land to a Regional Housing Authority for the construction of low-cost housing is advantageous to the municipality.

Memorandum, p. 5.. We agree that it would not be arbitrary for the municipality to determine that donation of land to a Regional Housing Authority for the construction of low-cost housing is advantageous to the municipality. We are not familiar with what you refer to as the "Indian Housing Authority," but agree with you that state law (as well as the Fourteenth Amendment) would not permit a municipal conveyance to such an entity if it was racially restrictive. However, such a donation may be made directly from the municipality to a Regional Housing Authority without first conveying it to the United States. The only apparent reason for conveying it to the United States initially would be in an attempt to avoid the constitutional problem resulting from a municipal conveyance specifically for the benefit of a racially restricted class.

AS 18.55.995, quoted in your Memorandum, p. 5, does not change this result. As initially enacted, it provided that the Regional Housing Authorities were created "for the specific purpose of implementing the President's National Indian Program for Indian Housing." However, the quoted language was repealed the following year in Section 2, Chapter 151 SLA 1975. Accordingly, while various specified Native associations are given the authority to establish Regional Housing Authorities under AS 18.55.996, and may receive donations of land from municipalities, the programs administered by those Associations must be racially neutral. Cf. Lien v. City of Ketchikan, 383 P.2d 721 (Alaska 1963) (municipality may lease land to sectarian order of the Catholic faith for construction and operation of a hospital to provide for care of sick without regard to race, color or creed and thus accomplish a valid public purpose).

As long as no restrictions on the use of the property based on race are imposed, there appear to be no obstacles to a conveyance of municipally-owned land for low-cost housing purposes. Under AS 18.55.996(b), Regional Housing Authorities have virtually identical powers to those of the Alaska State Housing Authority. Accordingly, under AS 18. 55.450, Regional Housing Authorities may accept donations from municipalities. Under AS 18.55.280, the municipality may donate property to a Regional Housing Authority without appraisal, public notice or advertisement or bidding. In sum, there are no legal obstacles to a direct conveyance from a municipality to a Regional Housing Authority for development of low-cost housing on a racially neutral basis.

You also conclude that a municipality conveying land to the Secretary under 25 U.S.C. § 451 for reconveyance for the benefit of Indians would not frustrate the legislative scheme of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. However, Section 2(b) of ANCSA evinces a Congressional intent that the Act be implemented "without establishing any permanent racially defined institutions, rights, privileges, or obligations, without creating a reservation system or lengthy wardship or trusteeship, and without adding . . . to the legislation establishing special relationships between the United States Government and the State of Alaska." A conveyance to the Secretary under 25 U.S.C. § 451 would appear to require that the lands conveyed be used for racially restrictive purposes in perpetuity. Although perhaps not expressly prohibited by ANCSA, such a device certainly would run counter to the thrust of that Act.

In addition, you do not distinguish between unoccupied Native townsite lands which may be conveyed directly to the municipality by the townsite trustee (see City of Klawock \underline{v} . Gustafson, Slip Op. No. K74-2 (D.C. Ak. Nov. 11, 1976)) and lands which village corporations must convey to municipalities (or to the State in trust for future municipalities) pursuant to Section 14(c)(3) of ANCSA. With respect to the latter category, a further conveyance from the municipality to the Secretary under 25 U.S.C. § 451 for a racially restricted purpose would appear to be a clear violation of the intent of ANCSA.

We hope you find these comments helpful. We recognize that the Federal Government is not bound by the equal protection requirements of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution and Article I, Section 1 of the Alaska Constitution when dealing with Natives. However, State-chartered municipalities oganized under AS 29 are subject to those requirements. While the fact that a municipal conveyance of land for a racially-restricted purpose would be unconstitutional may not prevent the Secretary from accepting the conveyance, we doubt the Secretary would knowingly encourage such an unconstitutional act.

I would appreciate the opportunity to discuss these matters with you at greater length at your convenience.

Sincerely,

MUNICIPAL LAND DISPOSAL -INCENTIVE LEASING

Fred B. Arvidson Partner

In this article, and the ones to follow in subsequent issues of THE MUNICIPAL ADVISER, we focus on land disposal primarily sales and leases of municipal land. In our first article we provide an overview of the policy issues involved. Does it really matter how land is sold or leased? Are there reasons for doing it a particular way? Later we will focus on the ways local governments can accomplish their objectives in leasing or selling public property while minimizing the risks of unfairness inherent in some methods although it might seem strange, questions like "how can we pro- mote the local economy?" and "how can we promote local hire?" are commonly raised when a local government seeks to lease (or sell) some of its real property. These are being asked in addition to the standard questions like 'shouldn't we get fair market value?" and "just what is fair market value anyway?" and we want to avoid competing with private enterprise?-

THE OBJECTIVE

The essential first step in a local government's consideration of the sale or lease of public land is to answer the question: "Just what are we trying to accomplish with this sale or lease?" Most problems in sale or leasing stem from the fact that the local governing body never had a clear answer to this question in the first place.

Answering this question is absolutely essential. If the primary J concern of the local community is to promote those industries that provide local employment, then the whole approach to the issue is different than one if the objective is to maximize revenues. If local hire is the goal, a lease that requires a certain level of local employment as a condition to the lease might make more sense than one that simply seeks the maximum price for the parcel. Writing an agreement that calls for local employment can't probably be done in a public auction setting, whereas a public bid might be the best possible way to maximize price.

Without a clear understanding of the objectives, a sale or lease program is doomed to fail.

Of course, in most situations there isn't just one objective.

With mixed motives (maximizing revenue, avoiding competition with "private promotion of local hire, to name just a few) it becomes very difficult to structure the following: 1) the property will be put on the market (public auction, request for proposals, private negotiation, etc.), 2) the measure to be used in deciding which private party will get the deal (total rent, commitment to investment, commitment to local hire, etc.), 3) how the deal will be structured (sale, lease, lease with options, etc.), and 4) who will negotiate the deal (the city manager, the council as a whole, a subcommittee, etc.).

There are many ways to dispose of property and the following outline should help identify which methods best serve different policy objectives.

DISPOSAL MECHANISMS

Public Auction: By far the simplest, and some can argue the fairest mechanism for land disposal is to put the land out to bid. For example, if a city owns a residential subdivision, a public auction bid sale of residential lots may well be the fairest mechanism for disposal. Some cities have followed this approach. This is also the approach taken by the State of Alaska in some of its remote parcel disposal programs where either a "first come-first served" approach (remote parcel staking) or a lottery approach has been used (fixed price but random selection of purchasers). All of these systems can work in the local community, although they seem to make the most sense when the government is disposing of a number of parcels that are generally equivalent in use and the use is a general one. A classic example would be residential lots in a subdivision.

The issue is much more difficult when the city is dealing with unique or one-of-a-kind land parcels or facilities. It may make eminently good sense to put 200 lots out to public bid for residential construction but it may make much less sense to put a unique 20 acre industrial development site out to bid.

Before the comprehensive changes to Title 29 in 1986 there was a substantial difference between how home rule municipalities and first and second class governments could dispose of land. Generally, first and second class governments couldn't dispose of land except by public auction and with ratification of the sale or lease the voters. This presented problems in that it is difficult to lease unique land or buildings by auction. For example, one developer may have a project that simply will not work without some changes in land use classification, or utility development, etc. Without the ability to negotiate those items from the local government a "fill in the blank" with the lease rate or purchase price may well preclude prospective tenants or buyers from even getting interested. With the changes to Title 29, first class and second class governments can develop their own disposal procedures IF THEY ADOPT CODE PROVISIONS TO THAT EFFECT. If a government has not enacted disposal provisions allowing for flexibility, then the "old" Title 29 provisions probably still apply and the local community simply doesn't have an option.

DISPOSAL BY REQUESTS FOR PROPOSALS

Under this approach, the local governments seek out those who might be interested in the land in an attempt to entice those people into making offers. This system is widely used in Alaska and has some distinct advantages in that it allows the proposer to tailor the deal to fit his individual needs. For example, one proposer might absolutely require the extension of an increased sewer main to the property. Another might need access to some other public property (for example, a dock) under certain conditions (preferential berthing while another might be more interested in some other feature of the property.

By allowing the prospective purchasers or tenants to develop their own proposal the local government can probably expand the market of people interested as those who might have been precluded because the "fill in the blank" approach taken in the auction System failed to meet a critical need.

Flexibility is the key to this approach and, at first look, it seems the best possible to go. Unfortunately, this system poses some real problems for the local government. A principal difficulty is trying to compare proposals that everyone recognized at the outset would be different (if they were all going to be identical - except for price - the auction method would have been the way to go). How do you fairly compare apples (rent) with oranges (commitments to invest)?

How does a city fairly chose between two proposers on the basis of financial ability, reputation, etc., and how do you prevent favoritism from creeping into the process? These are the difficult issues. A number of issues need to be addressed BEFORE the re- quest for proposals is prepared. A few key issues are:

1. Deadlines for submission and confidentiality. It hardly seems fair to let proposers learn from the competition before they have to submit their proposal. Extensions of time for proposals should probably NOT be granted except for EXTRAORDINARY circumstances (the airplane carrying the proposal crashed as opposed to a non-unusual delay due to weather). Proposals should be submitted in sealed packages and NOT opened until the deadline for receipt has passed. Someone in the city (most probably the city clerk) should keep careful records of when the proposals were received and assure that they are not made public until after the time for submission has passed.

2. Evaluation criteria. If the city is trying to accomplish some goal other than maximizing cash flow, (encouraging the development of a beneficial new industry) then those goals should be - spelled out in the request for proposals. The beneficial new industry was one of the very few exceptions under the "old" Title 29 that allowed disposal of property without auction or at fair market value.

The State of Alaska has developed fairly complicated and sometimes confusing systems for "grading" proposals. The price of the rent or purchase might be considered 40 % of the evaluation criteria. Our experience, however, has been that when the criteria are complicated and fixed it becomes very difficult to apply them in a rational way. Any attempt to take a subjective question (which proposal is better) and decide it based on objective criteria (the price is worth 40% of a total of 100 points) is really difficult to do. Using a formula to decide a subjective issue can lead to problems. Unless the formula is perfect, it leads to imperfect results. Too many times the evaluators try to fit their judgment as to which proposal they think is the best into the various criteria. Any such approach can lead to serious problems, as the results can be subject to attack ("Why did you rank Company A at a 30 and Company

B at a 28?").

It is probably better to recognize that the process isn't perfect and there may be no magical formula that will work. It is probably better for the city to spend its time and effort in ensuring that the people making the decision are fair and that the approach was fair.

3. Who decides. The biggest problem in a proposal process is the issue of who decides. The local governing body is responsible. Sometimes the responsibility for the decision and the people who make it are different. It is important to realize that this can be a disaster. If a Council says "we just followed the recommendation of our city manager" it should realize that the voters don't vote for the city manager, but they do vote for the council, so the council will be responsible even if it didn't participate in the decision making process; There is a lesson to be learned here. City councils should not blindly follow recommendations and city managers who want to keep their jobs shouldn't allow themselves to be put into the position of making that sort of decision.

Yet involvement of the city council in the entire process may not be practical.

Often a city council simply doesn't have time to hear the proposals for all parties, so a screening committee can be useful. Often the city manager or administration can act to screen proposals and make recommendations. Sometimes the proposals are so difficult to understand that a professional engineer or financial expert is required. For example, how can a city council member know whether the financing mechanism called for in a proposal is realistic? On those sorts of issues, the experts should be consulted. Similarly, the city attorney may be useful in reviewing the legal risks associated with the various proposals. We would not recommend that these experts (including the attorney) be relied upon to make the decision. Rather their function is to point out the risks involved and answer questions.

Another useful technique, especially where the project involves some sort of unusual proposals, is to have an interview process where the top proposers submit to interviews by the council (or a committee). 4. The procedure. Once the proposals are in there are bound to be problems. Sometimes a proposal is confusing. Does the administration have the right (or the duty) to contact the proposer and get clarifications? At what point do clarifications become negotiations? And if negotiations are to be conducted, who does them and what subjects can be covered?

These are difficult issues that need to be resolved, again, BEFORE the proposals are in. There are several basic safeguards that ought to be followed:

a) Equal access: If a proposer has a question — an issue not covered by the request for proposal — then the city ought to probably give the answer to all those who may have expressed an interest in submitting a proposal.

b) Bid shopping: No matter how good the request for proposal and the quality of a proposal itself, it is probably that the "best" proposers will have questions and the city will have concerns. How are these handled? A couple of problems arise. First of all, a city should be very careful not to be accused of "bid shopping." In a bid shopping environment the government seeks to change a proposer's bid or proposal based on the content of some other proposal (Company A offered us _____. Do you think you can match that?). These kinds of contacts can lead to serious trouble, including all sorts of opportunity for the bribing of public officials.

c) Open meetings: A problem present whenever any sort of contact occurs between the people making the decision. Do meetings of a subcommittee reviewing proposals have to be public? What about interviews between proposers and the council? If they are open do competing proposers have the right to attend, and if they do, doesn't the last to be interviewed have an advantage?

One possible way to try to bring some order to what can become a chaotic situation is to provide that the selection process will follow this order:

Those proposals that are "non-responsive" will be discarded and the best of the group will be selected for further review.
 A short list is then reviewed in depth by the group making the initial recommendation.

3. Experts as needed (financial experts to review financing pains, city attorney for review of legal risks) are called in by the committee to review areas and answer questions.

4. If there are questions that need to be answered the committee or its representative will contact the proposers for information. A record of those contacts should be kept, and when in doubt, the committee should carefully consider whether the information sought or received would provide a competitive advantage, and if it does, then the other proposers should be informed. 5. The committee should recommend more than one firm for the council to consider. 6. The council should pick what it considers to be the best proposal.

7. The administration should then negotiate with the top proposer until an agreement is reached (or until negotiations fail). That final agreement should then be submitted to the council and the public for a complete review, public hearing, etc.

Throughout the process any member of the council should be welcome to participate at any meeting with any party, so the council can be assured there is complete access to all information upon which they will base their decision.

There is a real conflict between the public purposes to be served by public meetings (open decisions openly arrived at) and the process of negotiation where the parties are trying to get the best possible deal. The same sort of policy issues that are present when negotiations between management and labor and public are present.

NEGOTIATION

The most flexible, the most conducive mechanism for private development is the so-called "disposal by negotiation." In this process, the local government and the private party sit down in the same way two private parties might in an effort to structure a deal that is good for both sides.

There are good reasons to have this procedure in the local government's repertoire of disposal mechanisms.

A typical situation might involve a private developer who has the idea to develop a new business in town (a self-service gas station, a bowling alley, a port facility to export a new commodity like coal). Ideas are the raw materials for businesses. Without the idea a new business can't be developed.

And yet once the idea is disclosed, it loses its competitive value, for anyone can then use it. Patents and copyrights protect some forms of ideas but ideas on which businesses start aren't capable of being protected.

If the response of the city to this innovative idea is to auction the land for the construction of a bowling alley - or even to solicit proposals for the development of a bowling alley - the competitive value of the idea to the person who thought of it is lost. There is an underlying feeling here that private parties ought to be able to benefit from their good ideas, and yet, the traditional disposal techniques of public land involve so much disclosure that the idea will most likely be made public long before a deal can be structured and there isn't any way to protect a competitor from using that same idea on private land in the meantime.

The competition, during the time the innovator is dealing with the city, could well tie up a private parcel to accomplish the same thing. In that case, the innovator loses the advantage of his idea while the local government loses any input it might have in the development.

One way to avoid this situation is to allow private proposals to be made, negotiations conducted, deals "made" and THEN disclose them to the public for approval by the local governing body.

This allows the private party to maintain the competitive advantage until a deal is struck even though he is dealing with a public agency.
