Statement Regarding Epinephrine Administration

On August 9, 2024, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved neffy (epinephrine nasal spray) for the emergency treatment of allergic reactions (Type I), including those that are life-threatening (anaphylaxis), in adult and pediatric patients who weigh at least 30 kilograms (about 66 pounds).^{1, 2}

Alaska Statute (AS) 08.80.030(b)(12), AS 08.80.168(e), and AS17.22.010 codified the availability of epinephrine for the treatment of emergencies, identifying auto-injector as a method of administering epinephrine. This advisory seeks to make clear that the language in AS 08.80.030(b)(12), AS 08.80.168(e), and AS 17.22.010105 regarding the administration of epinephrine, applies to ALL available, FDA-approved, pre-dosed forms of epinephrine.

Sincerely,
