AMCO Case # : AB18-0509

On 5-2-18 an inspection was conducted on our establishment. There were some discrepancies found and we have worked with the investigator to correct them, these are the violations and corrections indicated on the notice of violation.

Say Uncle

Say Uncle was 50 clones when the investigator was here, they counted 51 say uncle clones because we had spider mites and had to destroy some of the plants. At that time the one dead clone was overlooked but since then, the dead say uncle has been destroyed and all corrected in metrc

skywalker

We only have one surviving plant of this batch since the rest we destroyed because of spider mite, this was to preserve the stain. The investigator didn't notice the metrc tag since it had slid down the side of the plant and has since been corrected to hang from the plant. Reason plant tag wasn't found in metrc was do to incorrect spelling of strain name.

Mango

The count of $17+32=49$ which we had in metrc. when the investigator was here he counted 32 cuttings and 17 that we had put into cups 2 days prior. We have been letting them adjust before tagging to establish a root system since they were under 8 inches and new plants sometime don't take. Since the inspection we have entered all 49 clones into metrc as soon as they are planted regardless of there size.

AK47

When the investigator was here he counted an ak47 plant that we were trying to reguvinat since we had accidentally forgotten to clone any in that stain. They don't always survive and we were waiting to see if it would, after the inspection we have corrected this matter by tagging it into metrc. This plant was taller than 8" and we were unclear how to handle this due to the situation of the rejuving process. The investigator has cleared up that question during our conversation with him.

cookie kush

Cookie kush was mislabeled Tut so when the investigator was here he saw the Tut tag and wasn't seeing them in metrc. Since his visit we have corrected this issue and they have been entered into metrc with the correct strain name

Thank you
