

A CITIZEN OF SERVICE

Cachet Garrett is no newcomer to community involvement and leadership. Prior to becoming Campaign Director for the United Way of Southeast Alaska on September 16, Cachet Garrett, 26, was a student at the University of Alaska Southeast, where she studied Communication, served as student body president and founded an environmental club, and her enthusiasm for community service shows. "This is my first full-time job, and I love it!" Garrett said of her work as Campaign Director. "My job is quite dynamic, which is perfect for me."

An experienced volunteer and community advocate, Garrett worked part-time as a Health Educator in the Southeast Alaska Regional Health Consortium's Health Promotion Department. And before that, the former Palmer resident served in the same office as an AmeriCorps volunteer through the SAGA Connections program.
